You can join the hams Mark, but if you can't pass the exams all you get is cell phones and CB. If I couldn't have passed the exams, that's all I would get too. Radio spectrum is a priviledge, not a right.

Too many lowlife's think they should have a right to the spectrum without having to work for the priviledges. Your goofy ass is one of them.

Well, lucky for you, your CB buddy's and Markie, you dont have to pass an exam to use the internet. If passing a test were required, you and your CB buddy's would only have telephone, snail-mail, and the smoke signals from your burned up linear finals to communicate with each other.

Your license proposal sucks, but it probably sounds good to a drunk. All your proposal does is dumb down licensing standards. You like it because you get all allocations at once with one test. Your proposal is bad because there is no incentive to improve your skills and progress any further after passing the initial exam.

Now pour yourself a few more drinks and mull over this before you pass out you lazy ass drunk, and don't post here again unless you're sober.

The best proposal for amateur radio:

1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

5. If you saw KB9RQZ next to a large mud puddle would you drive close and splash him?

You don't want to earn radio "preledges" Mark. You're too lazy to put forth an effort to earn them.

That's what it sounds like to me.

If CB'ers had to pass a test, maybe they would understand things like distortion, overmodulation, and splatter.

The CAP has a JAG? I think robesin just likes to collect suits.

I'm going to have to find an organization chart and locate the JAG's office.

Sgt York-Robesin and Chesty Puller-Robesin. And probably Sgt Schultz-Robesin from Hogan's Heroes, and Corporal Agarn-Robesin from F-Troop.

Then there's Walter Mitty-Robesin from fiction.

He knows everything. But he'll never get the call.

He taught the 911 Ops that there's a dash between the digits, i.e., 9-1-1, and they can't find the dash on th{i]er dialpads, even in reverse.

Queezay and Oooday had a rape room. Don't know if Saddam participated.

Perhaps if robesin had been captured on one of his seven hostile forays behind enemy lines, we might have known the truth about Saddam.

It's not the Gay 90's anymore. But maybe before the 1st decade of the

I was jesting on the "JAG" part. :-) Robeson-Robesin has been on such a jag trying to impress folks (as a fraud) that his posts have enough material for at least two seasons of "JAG - a personal story."

1. What is this newsgroup, alt.usenet.kooks (AUK)?

A mass of electrons spread out upon bandwidth scattered across the globe for the express purpose of separating the wheat from the chaff of the net.

2. This is a joke, right? RIGHT?!!

No more a joke than the fact that ISPs let people on every day who have nothing better to do than annoy their neighbors enough to win by popular vote silly little awards created for just such buffoons as them.

3. What's this newsgroup for?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks is for the discovery and discussion of Kooks on Usenet and the Internet. These people are known technically as net.kooks.

4. What's this newsgroup NOT for?

This group exists for recreational Kookology, not for Very Personal Vendetta. It is not to be used for general harassment of someone, or for net abuse such as spamming and flooding and cancelbombing in an attempt to gain vengeance on someone or get the denizens of AUK to shut up. Either way, it won't work, it's very messy, "Bob" will give you triple your money back, and you don't get a life.

Also, we [tinw] are not in the business of harassing the vulnerable or the insane. Occasionally an apparent net.kook proves to be genuinely ill. In such cases the person is disqualified from winning awards and other posters are asked to avoid exarcerbating his or her problems.

Similarly, trolling or kook-hunting in support groups is strongly discouraged.

5. Who let this newsgroup in here, and why wasn't I notified?

That's what you get for hogging the Beer Fund.

(Here you can view the control message that started it all, from our Mighty Founder MAC.)

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/cmsg.html

6. Who is a net.kook?

If you post uniquely strange, preferably incomprehensible articles, or you manifest a persistent, extreme, and somewhat bizarre obsession, you just might be a net.kook. And more.

It is important to note the subtle distinction between a net.kook, a net.cretin, a clueless newbie, troll, or garden-variety @$$hole. The newbie, one hopes, can acquire a clue on the installment plan even if he can't afford to buy one for cash; the cretin is merely stupid and/or irritating; the troll makes a fool out of himself by making a fool out of you, the @$$hole is, well, simply that. But a TRUE net.kook has a special fascination derived from his/her/its utter ineffability. Their behavior is irrational, if not downright weird, but they are seldom merely boring.

It is not considered appropriate to nominate clueless newbies, trolls, or longwinded spambrains as net.kooks. It is acceptable to nominate net.cretins, or simply to present them, without nomination, for whatever minor amusement value they may have; but the real focus here is on net.kooks in all their raging, indomitable glory.

Important Disclaimer: the fact that someone has been proclaimed a net.kook does not imply any psychological diagnosis in and of itself. A net.kook may or may not be clinically insane; that is not the concern of the AUK audience.

We hope.

7. Can you show me a few examples?

I'd rather not, but it may help to clarify things... The person who posted a handful of meaningless, ill-formed newgroup messages on May 21, 1994 was a Clueless Newbie. The person who hung around alt.religion.kibology during April and May 1994, constantly posting boilerplate "warning" messages telling people that ARK messages were intentionally meaningless, was a net.cretin. The people who post demented "scientific" theories, like Archimedes Plutonium's concept of the universe being one giant atom of plutonium, and seem incorrigible to criticism, are moderate net.kooks. The sort of being who constantly raves about the conspiracy against her/him/it is an extreme net.kook, especially if he/she/it automatically assumes that anyone who questions their world-view is an agent of the conspirators or is an ultra right-wing/left-wing extremist, and hides behind an anonymous remailer to avoid "persecution" even though they would get one hell of a lot less of it by not posting at all.

http://www.insurgent.org/~jhd/kookway.htm

8. How do I present a Kook on this group?

The preferred technique is to get the suspected Kook to start posting to AUK so that we can all see him/her/it in all their first-hand Glory. You can do this by posting followups to the suspect's weirder messages, with your followups nonchalantly crossposted to AUK. If the suspect responds to your messages without editing the Newsgroups line, you've achieved your goal.

Another acceptable method is to repost, complete and unedited, one or two of the suspected Kook's recent rants. If you do this, please provide a brief intro in the header describing what the hell you're doing, such as indicating who this person is, what group you found the message on, or why you think the rest of us should give a rat's @$$ about it.

You should be aware that if you try this with some perfectly reasonable posting, you may be flamed to net.hell and back and probably suspected of being a net.loon yourself. It is also considered extremely lame to nominate someone as a Kook simply because you have lost, or at least failed to win, a debate with them; persistently doing so is likely to get you nominated for Kook Awards. That someone fails to perceive the self-evident, unassailable wisdom of your viewpoint does not, in and of itself, constitute Kookery.

9. What are the Kook Awards?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks offers a variety of widely-recognized and highly dubious honors for your service, applying to net.kooks everywhere. They recognize several kinds and many levels of net.kookery.

Here is a detailed list of AUK awards and descriptions.

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/awards.html

10. Who the FSCK appointed YOU net.kookologist/god/nazi etc.

Nobody. We have a Gift.

11. Are there any holidays in AUK?

Why yes, there sure are:

March 30th - CALL to ARMMs

Commemorating the earliest most virulent Kook post flood of Usenet, and the great flamewar that followed in its wake.

June 26th - KOOKS DAY

Named in commemoration of Earl Curley checking into the Motel Deep 6 to serve a major in the pine penalty box, the same date as Edmond Wollmann got arrested riding the San Clemente railway...on his motorcycle.

August 15th - DEAD DOC TAVISH DAY

Named in honor of the death of one of Usenet's most famed identities due to excessive Usenet exposure; his virtual corpse is buried in a rural cemetery near New Bremen, Texas

September 10th - KAZOO DAY

This holiday commemorates Raymond Ronald "Kazoo" Karczewski's conviction for seven felonies. May Raymold be a warning to all kooks who are tempted to think that a "Sovereign Christ" is above the law.

December 20th - AUK BIRTHDAY

The anniversary of the newgrouping of alt.usenet.kooks

12. What should I do if I'm paged on the Red Courtesy Telephone?

Give the caller Gandalf the Gray's speech to the demon. Verbatim.

13. Is alt.usenet.kooks archived anywhere?

Why would you even want to know? [But if you truly must know, GIYF. You masochist, you.]

14. What should we do about the book?

Burn it.

15. Where can I find out more about net.kooks?

Several mini-FAQs on classic kooks of the past and present (along with several non-kooky legendary netters) are available on the World Wide Web in various archives. Be sure to set aside coffee and cats before reading. [Try insurgent.org/kook-faq/]

16. What are the AUK Offices?

As well as the kook awards, kooks may compete to hold office for a month or longer. Nominations are made in exactly the same way as for awards; the difference is that the previous holder of the office always appears on the ballot paper when a new candidate emerges, and the winner remains in office until challenged again. At present, the offices are as follows.

Darth Bawl -

This office is held by Usenet's biggest crybaby.

Village Idiot -

The name says it all.

Kooki Information Minister -

Named in honour of Iraq's Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf, this office is held by the kook whose claims are most noticeably at variance with known facts.

Ministry of Circle Jerks -

Although many kooks are lone wolves, a few like to make friends with those who are as delusional as themselves. This office rewards the slurpfests that often ensue.

17. Are there any net.kook awards outside of AUK?

At various points of time there have been several, from the Christian groups' Steebie Award to alt.fan.art-bell's Angstrom Medal. At least two newsgroups, talk.politics.guns and comp.systems.mac.advocacy, have given out their own Kook of the Month awards. Check around from time to time to see what other net.kook awards might be around. [alt.atheism does them, too.]

18. What is the Cabal?

From the beginning of Usenet time, there has been but one force capable of holding it in check to remain in the realm of mortal existence. For today's Usenet world you need a Giant. A Behemoth. A Cabal of IMMENSE PROPORTIONS. A REALLY BIG CABAL to offer all news ORDER.

Within this force is the most ruthless and efficient organization on all Usenet, known as the Cabal Obsidian Order (COO). If YOU wish to know of this entity, read, learn, and do as you will.

SEE THE LIGHT OF COLLECTIVE WISDOM!!!

A. I SAID, what is the CABAL?

There Is No Cabal. Long Live The Cabal.

B. How does the Cabal function??

As well as any apocryphal organization can hope to function.

C. What are the weaknesses of the Cabal?

<chortle> What weaknesses?

D. What is the hierarchy and power structure of the Cabal?

Oh, you don't need to know that. Really. You can trust us, especially when it comes to information you haven't paid for.

E. What is the Cabal Obsidian Order?

The Cabal Obsidian Order (COO) is a profoundly secret collective of operatives designed to outrun, outgun and Eliminate the most vile scum and villainy the net has to offer.

F. How do I know if the COO is responsible for something?

If the COO's operatives are doing their job correctly, they'll be laughing at whoever is actually responsible.

G. Who are the leaders of the COO?

Leaders? Where we function we don't need Leaders.

H. What is the Beer Fund?

The more you contribute to it, the more we will tell you.

I. How may I apply to become an operative of the COO?

Pitiful begging at the Vote Wrangler's feet might help. Then again it might not.

19. Who is the FNVW?

Why, our highly esteemed Friendly Neighbourhood Vote Wrangler (FNVW), whose benevolent supreme dictatorship runs the electoral wheels of our great realm. Seven fearless folk have served, with distinction:

AUK VOTE WRANGLERS

Craig Dickson (1994-1995)
Matthew Legare (1995-1997)
Killfile Daemons (1997)
Robbie Honerkamp (1997-1998)
Phoenix (1997-2004)
Peter J Ross (2004-2006)
Sean Monaghan (2006-Present)

On retirement, Phoenix accepted the high office of Friendly Neighborhood "Bob"father.

20. Do I have what it takes to BE a Vote Wrangler?

<chortle> If you have to ask, you don't have what it takes.

21. Who do you %$#@!s think you are to oppose ME, Lord High Poster-Child of the Macrocosmic Universe?

We are the ones who can and will humiliate your @$$ if you use our group as your personal piss bowl. You are a freak of the universe. You do not give the orders here. And whether you like it or not, the universe is laughing behind your back.

22. That was MEAN, just plain MEAN!!!

Payback's a bitch, ain't it?

23. Should I expect ONE CONSISTENT response to my rude and obnoxious online behavior from the denizens of AUK?

Absolutely NOT.

24. To whom should I complain if I think I have been treated unfairly?

<Darth Vader>
You think you have been treated unfairly? </Darth Vader>

25. What kind of response can I expect as a result of my stupid online behavior at AUK?

Guilty party receives one or a combination thereof of the following assorted reactions (not at all limited to these, mind you):

1. Complete silence while we blow you off
2. Complete silence while we reload
3. Complete silence while we pull the plug on your account
4. Complete silence while we sleep at the switch
5. Complete silence while we sleep in our beds
6. Complete silence while we laugh behind your back
7. Complete silence while we wipe the splattered food and/or drinks off our screens
8. Complete silence while we contemplate the known macrocosmic universe
9. Complete silence while the Vote Wrangler pays good money to watch professional Denver teams find new ways to lose
10. Complete silence while we bask in the pure glow of our obnoxiously self-righteous selves
11. Complete silence while we play high-stakes poker with Snoopy, Spike, Andy, Olaf, Marbles and Woodstock
12. Complete silence while we never notice your NoCeM'd post
13. Complete silence while we never notice your spam-canceled post
14. Complete silence while we run your rude and obnoxious posts through goofyizers for reposting
15. Complete silence while the Trekkies among us watch the USS Defiant blast bad guys' ships into rubble and fly through the debris with that nice halo of sparks effect
16. Complete silence while we wait for our Gates-sponsored software systems to uncrash themselves
17. General laughter at your expense
18. General laughter and pointing at your expense
19. General laughter, pointing and personal insults at your expense
20. Someone exposes your true service provider to the Rabble
21. Someone does any of 1-20 and reports you to your state's Attorney General
22. Someone does any of 1-21 and reports you to the FBI National Computer Crime Squad (nccs@fbi.gov)
23. Someone does any of 1-22 and does highly amusing parodies of you during the entire process
24. Talk amongst ourselves about life, love and why they sell 8-hot-dog weenie sets with 10-bun packages
25. Sounds of awe as we wonder with dropped mouths how you were able to make a greater fool of yourself than you already had
26. Sounds of astonishment as we MARVEL at the FREAK
27. Flames in your generally specific direction
28. Flames of you in the third, fourth and fifth person
29. Flames from the Vote Wrangler from the other side of the Galactic Killfile just to annoy all hell out of you

30. Nominations for many noteworthy Kook awards

26. Can I really be kicked off my ISP for...

Being a total @$$hole?

If you try hard enough.

Top-posting like the pathetic imbecile that I am?

Usually not, but we can always try.

Forging someone else's valid e-mail address?

Absolutely.

Posting multiple copies of the same message to individual news groups (Excessive Multi Posting [EMP])?

Of course. It's the SPAMMING, stupid.

27. Can I really be thrown in jail for posting threatening messages?

Yes. People have been tried and convicted for sending threatening or harassing Email or Usenet posts. We do NOT support censorship of the Internet; however, posting a message stating you are going to cause virtual or unvirtual harm to someone will probably gain you a visit from your Friendly Neighborhood FBI Agent.

28. Fine. I'll just remain anonymous. That'll work, right?

BWWAAAAAAAAA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Try it, pinkboy. An anon remailer service can be forced to turn you in for copyright violation, harassment, stalking; you name the crime - they've got the time. If you ran an anon remailer service what would be the point of protecting flagrant abusers of the net and the Law??

29. Okay, then I'll bust your #$%&$*!! @$$ off AUK instead!

Uh... yeah. Many denizens of AUK are abuse admins, know abuse admins, sleep with abuse admins, or otherwise have years of experience dealing with and educating others about precisely your kind of dubiosity. A good account is a terrible thing to waste, so don't sacrifice yours on our altar.

30. I just realized I am a Maroon. How can I improve my standing in the eyes of the Internet, my balloon doll, and, most importantly, "Bob"?

REPENT. The End is always near.

You would automatically get the highest internet license available as much as you troll. You could probably get a pay check also. But when you fill out your 1040EZ form you will have to list kOOk as your occupation.

What kind of life would you have if you couldn't troll RRCB?
When you have something technical to add to this group, Maybe you would be taken seriously. You are no better that Mark Morgan who you troll for constantly. I guess you consider him your intellectual equal.

Demon Prince of Absurdity
Looney Maroon nominee for August 2006 Johnny D Wentzky foamed:
"You never asked someone who goes into areas of the internet that are only for adults who has an underage id somehow or another if they are a cop posing as an underage person online?
I guess lots of people just don't watch dateline or read stories much.
Why don;t you go to pervertedjustice,com and see what they do. They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they lied to membners of the public.
They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. They make themsleves into liars by falsely impersonating underage persons and by not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats.
Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.
Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. They feel as if they can lie and then order the victims to get counseling in the gayblade, governmental, pro-choice tax leech counseling centers. They are doing nothing more than usury and fraud in many cases." -- Wentzky

Hey slow code you didn't even comment on my idea to qsy to cw. I didn't think you would. You probably can't cpy ur own name at 5 wpm! LOL (hence "slow code")

AND for those who don't want the simple easy to pass ham ticket, blanket license 25.000 through 27.995 for what ever, just limit the power to something where nothing was bothered or the op couldn't hurt themselves easily.

Why, Woger, can't you recognise a movie reference crossed with an Elmer Fudd ref? It's so perfect for you, too. You're as dangerous as a rabbit, and you're looney-tunes as well.

BWHAHAHAHA Rabbits also reproduce quite a bit, unlike eunuchs like you who still watch cartoons because that is the highest limit of your level of comprehension. And your sodomizing of your shemale sex partner doesn't count.

Mark, you don't have to apologize to anyone.

If Slow Code isn't a throwback to 7 decades ago, he is one example of a thoroughly brainwashed morseman imprinted with the Beliefs of 70 years ago...and all the mythos of "code saves lives" that spread like kudzu after the Titanic disaster of 1912.

So far, Robeson has NOT been convincing. He IMPLIES and ALLUDES to things but hardly ever states anything outright and then never with any referencible sources that anyone can access.

Robeson has tried to construct an edifice, indeed almost a temple in which we should all venerate his mighty accomplishments AND, at the same time, has leveled barrages of personal insults and deragatory accusations against all challengers. That latter action negated his mighty constructs and established his fraud. That 'edifice' has to be torn down...if for no other reason than being an eyesore to us in his field of dreams.

In reality, the STATE Guards (not all states have them) are little more than state political constructs to enable a few to play soldier and otherwise establish their machismo. Part of that is the ever-present "conspiracy theory" coupled with some kind of imaginative armageddon scenario of a doomed future where everything in a state is in ruins or anarchy but the "state guard" can step in and "restore order."

The curious thing about the latter is that some of the Believers in the efficacy of morsemanship think in the same manner...that only amateur radio survives the worst emergency and that only morsemanship can be used to call for help. That is patently absurd in light of reality but founded on the mythos of morse that grew following the Titanic disaster of 94 years ago.

As to fully-activated National Guard units, the states have various plans to keep the NG structures and land intact, usually using civilian personnel (law enforcement, probably) and that does not require a lot of personnel. In the field of communications for the REAL public safety agencies, those agencies are well-supplied with many forms of communication of their own (outnumbering amateur licensees according to EIA data of about 15 years ago) that is NOT part of the "telephone infrastructure" that many ham-patriots erroneously think "always fails in an emergency." Most public safety agencies in the USA have established emergency-scenario plans and they periodically train/drill for those procedures. Very few amateur radio local organizations do that.

For several months past I simply did not bother accessing Google for this newsgroup. It was a waste of time when the macho middle-school mental-adolescents came in and talked trash and filth to anyone. How many of those anony-mousies were actual amateur radio licensees is unknown and irrelevant. The known licensed amateurs just didn't do anything about them. That presents a very BIG negative on the amateurs' ability "to police their own." They couldn't. They can't despite their brags about such "policing."

Robeson once made claims that he was IN one of the local Los Angeles HRO stores, with "friends while visiting them." A big problem with that was that was his claimed time-line and NOT being able to describe, even in minor detail, the locations or the surrounding territory. The first HRO in northern L.A. was in Van Nuys, CA, in the center of the San Fernando Valley. [bought my Icom R70 there years ago] That HRO moved to Burbank, CA, a few years ago, at the corner of Buena Vista and Victory (a major intersection with shops at all four corners). It is across the street from a relatively new food supermarket having a huge elevated sign visible from all four corners. Robeson could not describe that sign, let alone the location, even though it was easily visible (he didn't name the supermarket). It is very familiar to me since my wife and I shop there regularly. Robeson couldn't name a single store in the mini-mall across the street from the market even though there's a Radio Shack outlet next to that HRO. That HRO has now moved again (they had a window sign announcing that for weeks) and we will see if Robeson wants to repeat all of his lies about being in any one of them. :-)

Brian and I were being sarcastic about "boot camp." The US Army and the USAF never had "boot camp." In those branches is was called BASIC TRAINING. It still is and is usually referred to familiarly as just "Basic."

I "took Basic" at Camp Gordon (now Fort Gordon) which was in 1952 a Signal Corps center and now THE Center for Army Signal Corps. We had to learn basic infantryman soldiering, how to "close with the enemy and destroy them." No fun in that part of Georgia near Agusta. The only communications taught in Basic were courier duties and connecting/using an EE-8 Field Telephone plus laying field wire (real grunt work carrying that auto-pay-out wire box on a back pack). After 8 weeks of Basic we were assigned to Signal Schools...Field Radio and TTY at Gordon, radar-microwave-photography at Ft. Monmouth, NJ. For me, "fun" didn't begin until Monmouth and the ability to actually handle radios, examine their guts and theory, use them on the air.

Things have changed greatly in military communications since 54 years ago. The Field Radio MOS long since became extinct and with it the need to learn manual radio-telegraphy. HF radio is still taught but more as an adjunct to VHF radios common from small units to battalion level...the SINCGARS family of digital voice/data, optional frequency-hopping and encrypted modes with a quarter million produced since 1989 and all operational...to be replaced soon with a compatible but upgraded family of radios with more and better features. HT-sized SINCGARS-compatible radios are being used in Iraq and Afghanistan now (you can see them on news telecasts). The ONLY radiotelegraphy classes are centered at the Military Intelligence School at Ft. Huachuca and that for (passive, listening-only) Intercept Analysis purposes, not communications.

Some non-active or never-serving morsemen in here have insisted that Special Forces "use" radiotelegraphy since a Special Forces Communications Sergeant MOS is required to know that. Special Forces are very macho in image but they, like the USN SEALs, are a very small group of specialists, for (as their name implies) Special operations. The major Army and land-force marines effort is done by regular land soldiers. "Behind the lines" (quaint euphemism) comms can be done by regular land signal units by encrypted data over VHF-UHF, relay by aircraft or satellite, extemely hard to intercept. Even in the 1990 First Gulf War there was no "CW" used from "Behind enemy lines." The AN/PSC-3 did that or, in a few locations inside Iraq, by VHF voice or data.

The extreme mobility of USA land forces now, and in 1990, is described in the many land-forces reports done on the First Gulf War, namely Operation "73-Easting." The final hundred hours of the First Gulf War outdid the best panzerfaust actions of Rommel in North Africa of 1942-1943. About two orders of magnitude better. One thing that the American military did copy from Rommel's units was "Nevis" or NVIS, Near Vertical Incidence Skywave, short-distance ionospheric bounce that some hams deride as "cloud burning." Nevis works rather well and has been a field procedure in USA-USMC-USAF land-to-land comms for at least a quarter century.

World War 2 was over 61 years ago. Vietnam War was over 33 years go. The First Gulf War started (and finished almost as quickly) 16 years ago. The Korean War went into a state of perpetual Truce 53 years ago. Amateur morsemen still gorge their imaginations on the Titanic disaster CW comms of 94 years ago. Time has gone on and technology has changed...for all but those hidebound morsemen are still pipe-dreaming their imagined glory and self-steam after watching old WW2 movies on late-night TV, demanding that future amateurs learn morse to defend their homeland. :-)

You were hoping the K00k's would make RRAP unbearable to get even

You might have gotten some priviledges, but that was only because ham radio has been dumbed down and you didn't have to make an effort to earn them.

You're too friggen lazy to put forth an effort to earn anymore priviledges, that's why you want ham radio dumbed down.

Now, if I lived near you, I would do CW practice for you to upgrade. I honestly would. What you should do if you have an HF receiver is to try to find some code on air to practice copying.

Maybe you could talk N9OGL into making Omega One a code practice station.
He could send Code practice runs in between all the shitty songs he plays.

The best course is to go stand next to an old lady, preferably one who looks wealthy. Let fly with your pressure-release, then turn to the old lady and whisper loudly, "Look innocent, lady, and everybody will think that I did it!" :-)

Not kosher, Pedey. Only the current FNVW can post a ballot.

Is their a major lost of interest in the k00k awards? That seems to be the case.

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!

If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!
(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS!
("The cops like that, when people know their rights. That way they don't have to read them to you on the way to the station." - George Carlin)
The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like. Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet.

Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.
(20-Mar-05) Anyone who does not believe that you are the reincarnation of [$DIETY_OR_PROPHET] is obviously an infidel lacking in faith whose soul in in peril of everlasting damnation.
When responding to one line challenges, post paragraphs of rants and screed in response.
Incoherency is not a roadblock to poasting.
Neither is illiteracy.
Delusions poasted often enough become fact.
Claim you will destroy <insert newsfroup> for attacking you.
When spnaked, send cmsg for Fanboi newsfroup(s).
Find your Lame, Use your Lame, Be your Lame!
Post Edit when the TRVTH hurts.
Always sneck the offending newsfroups.
Always poast pictures of yourself so you can be admired in all your k00ky glory.
Always accuse others of the very acts you are guilty of.
Post lots of boasts about your high IQ and incredible talents.
(20-Mar-05) If you repeat a lie often enough, it becomes the truth. Anybody who fails to understand this is engaged in a deliberate campaign of misinformation and character assassination.
Always <plonk> somebody just before replying the plonkee!
The k00k considers itself the most intelligent person in any conversation, possibly on the planet. Other people are benhighted and ignorant, and have been waiting their whole lives for the k00k to rescue them from intellectual darkness.
Write a self-published book and claim it a success. Bonus points for comparing it to "Mein Kampf" and/or the Bible.
Declare yourself equal to a deity of your choice.
Claim that you've come from other planets.
Claim thousands of past lives.
Frothing complaints carry far more weight when you send them from "legal@" some domain.
Nothing strikes terror into the hearts of your detractors more than telling them that you're archiving their messages for possible use in the future.
Never forget that everyone else posting to Usenet is a paid disinformation agent looking to discredit you.
Usenet is governed by US law. If a poster in Romania killfiles you, he's obviously violating your 1st Amendment rights and can be sued.
Every news admin in the world hangs out in NANAU, and they're just dying to nuke the account of that meanyhead who just called you "fucknozzle". Drop 'em a line - that's what they're there for, after all.
AUK will be closed down. Just you wait and see.

They've nuked hundreds of accounts in the name of free speech and yours will be next.
The k00k will, without any trace of irony, lie, manipulate, impersonate, censor, and declare themselves powerful in ways ranging from the ability to have an account shut down to being God Herself, in order to convince people that they are not liars, manipulators, censors, or insane.
Abuse women while telling how many hundreds you've loved. Nevermind that you're one ugly motherfucker and that there were 30,000 femininas that thought you were a scumbag with bad teeth.
Remember that your ko0ky klaims are 'facts', and that 'facts' do not require proof.
Do not neglect to poast your responses to forums that the originator doesn't read. This will make the people in that forum very impressed with how you tear him to shreds without him being able to respond. They like it even better if you are off-topic for that forum.
Keep in mind that lack of evidence supporting your konspiracy theory actually _is_ evidence, of how effective the konspiracy is in hiding.
(06-Oct-05) When spanked, always retreat to the safety of the Ad Hominem.
(04-Aug-2005) When spanked mercilessly for days on end, proving with each poast just what an illiterate and ignorant fool you are, ALWAYS claim ownership of [person(s),froup(s)]. This works on so many levels. It inspires dread in your opponents that they will no longer be able to poast in their home froup and that they will eventually have to pay rent, to name just two.
Any problems with your poasts are the fault of the konspirators, who are trying to stop you from preventing the extinction of humanity.
Konspiracies that are able to subvert whole governments are always unable to silence konspiracy ko0ks.
The entire United States government is willing to spend millions of dollars for the sole purpose if harassing you.
Hollywood is making movies based on your personal life.
Do not consult psychiatrists or other mental health professionals. They are part of the konspiracy, and will sedate you and lock you away and keep you drugged if you tell them the truth.
Numerology and Astrology are respectable sciences and are useful for proving your case.
Everyone is Tim Hill, or David Green, or...
There is a fine line between trolling and kookery. Find that line and cross it repeatedly. When you are killfiled and/or LARTed for net.abuse as a result, claim victory. If you lose multiple accounts, this merely proves that you are indeed a world-class troll, with a black-belt in manipulation.
If you respond to every post someone else makes, they're obsessed. If they respond to less than 1% of your posts, they're even more obsessed.
Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.

Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity. You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.
If doing something results in the loss of your account, legal hassles, or blunt trauma injury, do it again. It always works better the second time.
Asterisks, lots and lots of Asterisks.
Poking holes in kookscreed is stalking, and is a felony.
K00ks LOVE to "connect the dots". They are, of course, dots that only the k00k can see.
"They laughed at Einstein, too!"

Do tell what language that would be, no code cartoon character.

That would be, "I heard dat, I did."
Or, "Ten-Roger, Good Buddy."

Maybe even, "Often imitated, never duplicated."
or...
"There he goes, causing hate and discontent".
or...
"Roger Dee" and "Rodney Dee" and...
"Forty-Two"
.......and ya gotta turn on the echo box and Roger Beep for, "I heard that, I did. I'm on the double nickel and watching for smokey."

And the best? The one the local CB hillbillies like the most? "Shame on the mess."

Did that answer your question? 10-4????

However, Deano's a notedly delusional k00k who thinks I am Leola/"Text

The God of Odd Statements
Stupidity Takes Its Toll. Please Have Exact Change.
Please remember to vote Outer Filth John Harrington, "James C. Cracked", and "Ward Hardmanure"/"Pete"/<wfh_jr> for KotM, CotM, CNotM, and the Special Ops Cody Memorial Award!
Thread where outing begins: http://tinyurl.com/hojf8
Also vote Ward Hardmanure for Order of the Holey Sockpuppet!
For the July/August ballot coming early September to a newsgroup near you
George Pickett Memorial Award nominee <wfh_jr@hotmail.com> on outing personal contact info in x-poasted subject lines:

"Plenty of people post under their real names and do not attempt to hide their contact info. You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it. You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited by a couple of guys with baseball bats. Other people don't have this obsessive fear. Ward Hardman himself has posted plenty of personal information - nothing that anyone else added was hidden in any way. You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about different categories of bad dudes who 'out' scum like you.

"Meanwhile you are the ugliest pigfucker in the universe. You are the coward without ethics. You call me a 'newbie' - ha! what an asshole you are. Those who want to remain anonymous do so. There is absolutely no way you could identify me, not unless you had the sort of subpoena power that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

"What a dickless wonder you are 'Snarky' you fat asshole."

You wrong. Tood, he work at Omegma One Radio so he can support FCC by paying big fines for illegal ops. Lloyd, he district manager of pizza place now. Larry, nobody know. Roger (who goes by the name "Woger"), he gots to finish up his work release program before he can get back his janitor job (he gone this weekend on work release). Mark, he gets all the money he needs from Al Qaeda, on account they paying him not to join up or try to help them in any way.

I just wish that all these HAM RADIO ASS-HOLES would go back to jamming each other on their stupid ham radio frequencies with their obsolete radios and their big antennas. That's about the only thing they are good for anyway, apart from looking like old fat obsolete geeks with all those antennas on their cars and their stupid walkie-talkies which can only do 1/10th what my Nextel can do any day of the week..

I don't think it's an accident that rec.radio.amateur.policy is up for a Busted Urinal in either August or September (depending on whether Hawk's second of the nomination stands, or Daev's does). Your description of the group's regs is probably pretty accurate, given their usual output on usenet...

I was in the movie theater at the time and the Mark, you have to give up on this anonymous "Slow Code." He is just another of the Bigot Morsemen. He cannot adjust to changing times, changing technology, or (perhaps) changing his underwear.

The FCC establishes regulations for ALL United States civil radio. What the FCC says, goes. The ARRL doesn't rule, morsemen don't rule, and old, old traditions don't rule. The FCC has NEVER said anything about "earning" a license...a license applicant must take an FCC-approved test and score above an FCC-established minimum percentage correct answers. That's all there is. FCC regulations are LAW and that LAW can be changed by democratic principled means. That LAW is not established by some minority group who cannot advance beyond primitive on-off carrier keying.

This "Slow Code" (like all bigoted morsemen) has taken up a role of "I-am-your-leader" gang-banger bullshit bragging and usual calling names of those licensees "below" him. Poor guy (or gal?). That's all this "Slow Code" has...SOME manual morse code skill. He might be right at home in an 1870s telegraph office but his attitude is neither for democratic principles, nor for good fellowship in a hobby, nor as a human being participating in a discussion forum.

The FCC doesn't "rule" on any amateur radio "traditions." It simply regulates ALL US civil radio (amateur radio is a small part of that) and mitigates interference when it happens. The FCC follows the LAW in their charter, permitting an open forum for Comments on NPRMs, even R&Os, open for ALL citizens and even allowing Comments from non-citizens.

Bigot morsemen do NOT allow any opinions opposing their own over-inflated self-defined opinions. They want to RULE all the Homies in da Ham Hood. They think they "own" ham radio when the only thing they've "earned" is a bad attitude against them. It's a wonder they haven't taken up Spark transmitters (even though damped-wave mode is forbidden by law). Spark and morsemanship went together in olden days, days well before the existance of any of the bigot morsemen in this forum. "Slow Code" needs a time machine to go back to that old era since he can't keep up with modern times nor the democratic principles of the representative republic of the United States of America.

As a professional in radio communications, one who began in and on HF over a half century ago, I have contempt for the over-inflated egos of the bigot morsemen. None have made their case valid enough to warrant morse code testing for amateur radio licenses forever. But, the ARRL is toadying to them, vainly hoping to increase their minority membership by sticking to the amateur practice of a half century ago. ARRL membership hasn't increased beyond a quarter of all licensed radio amateurs in the United States, nor has the ARRL favored, ever, the VHF-and-up amateur radio licensees beyond the barest minimum of mentions.

Sooner or later the FCC will yield to PUBLIC pressure to modernize US amateur radio beyond the old-fashioned limitations and favoritism towards morsemanship lobbied for by the ARRL. It may not come in "Slow Code's" lifetime since he is of the group where a morse key has to be pried from his cold, dead fingers. Poor "Slow Code," old before his time, unable to fit into this new millennium of radio technology.

It is an ILLEGAL station too, which is what I like a lot. Even its lower sideband sticks out into a part of 9M which is much more restricted than its official freq, so it is doubly illegal, and that is really kewl. Todd can lose his ham license, plus pay a big fine, if he plays his cards right.

Go, Todd, go!

Nominations so far for Civility Awards

These are ALL nominations (no filtering has or will be done) for the Civility Awards that I've received so far. There's still plenty of time to nominate others. Votes for write-ins and "none of the above" will also be accepted. Nominations or votes that I can't find or are submitted after the first midnight GMT of 14 September cannot be accepted.

Is 5kW on a CB band even legal?

Go for it, Congenial Fred, show 'em who's boss in da ham hood!

Ya know, US amateur radio is supposed to be about good fellowship and all that warm and fuzzy stuff. Poor Fred long since ran out of warmth and his mind is fuzzy...tsk.

What are YOU "better at," Congenial Fred? Morse code? I'm sure you are a whiz at that. Anything else except getting a bad score on the range after shooting off your mouth? I'll bet not.

Wow (yawn) 50 years a ham (and still not cured). I've been a professional in radio longer than that. Fascinating stuff that radio and electronics technology. Morse code isn't technology per se...it was being done over 40 years before the first radio-as-a-communications-medium was demonstrated in 1896. But you "are better" than non-morsemen because you passed a NON-TECHNICAL, NON-INTELLECTUAL manual morse code test...as an AMATEUR. [big Ben Stein "wowwww" here]

"Welfare license?" Just because there's no manual morse code test for Technician class? Oh, my, but the FCC does NOT say anything about "welfare licenses." That's only your own BIGOTRY vomited up. Almost half of all US amateur radio licenses are now in the Technician Class. Are you deliberately trying to alienate half of all ham licensees? Well, Congenial Fred, you are doing real good on that alienation part.

Have fun on "the bands," Fred, there's plenty of your kind there, the bigoted morsemen, the self-proclaimed gods of AMATEUR radio trying to be "leaders" in da ham 'hood.

Fred, support stem cell research. You've lost too many neurons required for good fellowship...maybe some stem cells can help restore them.

Brian, sudden realization! We may have found the illegitimate biological father of Stebie Robeson!

Same ego, same "better than you" bad attitude, same lack of good fellowship, same 9-year-old's sass, same-o same-o! Incredible!

Then again he may be a cousin to that anony-mousie "Slow Code."
Lots of inbreeding going on in the morsemen ranks.

I wonder where Jimmy Noserve is hiding? Fred said "shut up!"
Jimmy would have a hissy fit if'n he saw that...:-)

I extend fellowship to REAL hams, you no code idiots are not hams, simply CBers that have the ability to read at a third grade level.

Everyone serves a purpose, even if only as a bad example... No code, non showering, non intellectial, whiners holding welfare licenses meet that criteria to a "T".

Now that you have been responded to in the manner you accuse all code able hams of, you may cease your trolling...

I don't really give a flip one way or another if you ever know code, I just wish the bunch of you would stop playing "pity me" and lamenting the fact you do not have a no code Jesse Jackson type to take up your cause. You have a license, enjoy it and if you don't care to learn the code, someday you won't have to. In the mean time shut up with the whining and get on with life.

The license is only worth the investment you have in it, no effort - no value! If you spent half the time learning as you do bitching you would be at 40 WPM.

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 291,209 (43.2%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of September 1, 2006:

Novice - 24,494 (3.7%) [decrease of 24,835]
Technician - 284,694 (43.3%) [increase of 79,300]
Technician Plus - 36,183 (5.5%) [decrease of 92,677]
General - 132,213 (20.1%) [increase of 19,536]
Advanced - 71,045 (10.8%) [decrease of 28,737]
Extra - 108,307 (16.5%) [increase of 29,557]

(percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 320,877 (48.8%) [decrease of 13,377]

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 311,565 (47.4%) [increase of 20,356]

Total all classes - 656,936 (decrease of 17,856)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

259. SSB is no good for Omega One music because of phase distortion

So that's why Omega One Radio sounds so shitty. It is simply true that single sided AM signals don't preserve phase when they are detected, and that leads to distortion. You have to use a phase locked loop to do that, provided that the station transmits a small residual carrier or a vestigal sideband for the loop to lock onto.

Otherwise the audio sounds like crap, just like it does on Omega One Radio.

The deal is that Omega One didn't listen to Woger when they asked for his expert opinion. Now they are paying the price and are losing audiophile listeners right and left. Not even Mark Morgan listens any longer.

BTW, I didn't know we lost ham radio and need to take it back.

Blow Code, think before you type will you? You spend entirely too much on CW will you? They are lonely and need you there.

So, and you lost me about 9m?? I think your smoking crack!! as for losing my license I really doubt that, you see I have a number of cards
I can play and the FCC will wish not to go after me.

>I extend fellowship to REAL hams, you no code idiots are not hams, simply >CBers that have the ability to read at a third grade level.

Tsk, tsk, Fred. Had you been able to read RRAP before, you'd know I have no amateur license, only a commercial one. :-)

So, you think that US amateur radio is defined ONLY by morsemanship? Of course you do. You are unable to cope with any other definition. The FCC doesn't think so, Congenial Fred. Only you and the rabid olde-tyme morsemen think so.

>Everyone serves a purpose, even if only as a bad example...

You fill that bill to a "T" Congenial Fred. :-)

>No code, non >showering, non intellectial, whiners holding welfare licenses meet that >criteria to a "T".

"Non showering?" :-) Shirley, you can think of some metaphor better than that! :-)

"Non intellectial?" Oh, you mean 'non intellectual."
Tsk, tsk, Congenial Fred, if you wish to appear 'intellectual'
you really ought to learn to spell correctly... :-)

"Whiners?" Poor congenial Fred, can't understand that there are several valid reasons being held by the majority AGAINST morse code testing. You want to impose YOUR imperial will on the majority... Tsk, tsk, not a nice democratic principle idea.

"Welfare licenses?" I got my First 'Phone in 1956, one test session at the Chicago Field Office of the FCC. Had to pay my own way in on the train. No snow, ground was level, and I kept my shoes on the whole time. Guess that isn't near as good as all them olde-tymers in the ham boonies, huh? :-)

>Now that you have been responded to in the manner you accuse all code able >hams of, you may cease your trolling...

Fred, you've shown yourself to be a first class morse BIGOT, one with a totally closed mind who lives in the past. But, that's not unusual among some of you kids (your birth year is 1939 but mine is earlier). After you hit the magic 65-year mark you go all shirty and start whining yourself about how "tough" YOU had it and how "loyal and principled" you are and how the "younger generation is no damn good" because they don't like YOUR ideals of a long-ago youth. I know, I've seen it hundreds of times...and am damn glad I never succumbed to such mental sickness. :-)

Oh, and I do NOT "accuse all code able hams" of anything, only YOU, Fred Hambrecht, and all the other morsemen bigots who trash-mouth everyone who doesn't care for morsemanship.

I don't "troll," congenial Fred, I CATCH. I've presented my views before the FCC clearly, logically, with facts researched and noted. Many times. I don't sing praises about morse code or testing for the simple reason that there's no praise for either.

>I don't really give a flip one way or another if you ever know code, I just >wish the bunch of you would stop playing "pity me" and lamenting the fact >you do not have a no code Jesse Jackson type to take up your cause.

Tsk, are you a racial bigot ALSO? I'm not black, congenial Fred, don't fake any religious titles nor academic titles nor the usual bragging bullshit common to so many amateurs. I've been on this planet longer than you have and made my own way without asking for welfare. Up yours and enjoy your food stamps.

Well, maybe no "Jesse Jackson" but you pro-code-test mavens DO have the Church of St. Hiram on your side plus all the Brother Believers in Newington alla time singing the praises of "cee-double-yew" that all good maxim-fearers must follow.
To the letter. To a "T."

>You have >a license, enjoy it and if you don't care to learn the code, someday you >won't have to.

I have a license, Freddie baby, but it NEVER had any requirement to learn morsemanship skills. I've had other FCC licenses, Freddie, and those didn't have any need to learn code. Of course those were all commercial-professional, not the mighty amateur kind (which you no doubt consider much, much more valuable).

Freddie booby, 53 1/2 years ago the US Army had me and several others starting to operate HF transmitters of higher output power than was ever allowed to amateurs. NO license test needed. NO morsemanship skills needed...NO morse code modes were used to keep dozens of circuits open 24/7.

I didn't have to know or learn morsemanship over a half century ago and haven't needed it in all the time up to now. You come along like some adolescent male and talk trash to me and other no-code-test advocates and say I "must?" Oh, my, you must think your morsemanship skills are super-macho with superpowers!

>In the mean time shut up with the whining and get on with >life.

Shut your own, bigot Freddie. You get NO breaks acting like a morseman bigot. Bigots don't deserve any civility.

"My life" is going on just dandy without you, Freddie. Try to stay out of it. Intrude on it and you get stepped on.

>The license is only worth the investment you have in it, no effort - no >value!

Oh, wow, trotting out the "moral paragon" ploy are you? :-)

Sounds like you are getting ready to enter the seminary at the blessed Church of St. Hiram!

>If you spent half the time learning as you do bitching you would be >at 40 WPM.

One "learns" a psycho-motor skill? :-) It is DEVELOPED,
Freddie boy, isn't one damn thing "intellectual" about it.

Pressing the government for a change in certain laws, such as the regulations concerning amateur radio licensing, isn't "bitching," colonial Fred. It is simply a democratic process to change archaic laws and regulations that have no use today. But, you fear change. Such might detract from your mighty self-image of an amateur morseman, god of radio, and ruler of the ham-ways. :-)

Or is it that you want to CONTROL others, have them do as YOU command and to hell with democratic principles of law?
Clarify that for us, Freddie, you seem to be swinging both ways.

Freddie, there is zero-point-zero interest in "learning" any psycho's motor skill in this new millennium. It isn't used for communications in any other radio service under USA regulations and won't be...except in the time-retarded imaginations of some US radio amateurs who dream of everlasting glory of the beeperman.

There is one helluvalot MORE INTERESTING, INTELLECTUAL things to do in learning the theory behind the front panel. Don't speak blithering drivel about "beauty and majesty" of monotonic on-off tones while caressing your vibroplex...the only "theory" there is turning something on and turning something off. You can do that with a buzzer if it turns you on so strong.

You want to do 40 words per minute using morse? Fine. Go for it. I've been doing ONE HUNDRED TIMES that with data and that's at a slow speed. The world's comms aren't about manual telegraphy, Freddie, that's a long-past time that began before you and I were born. It is OLD stuff.

Now you go right ahead and enjoy your "ARS" (Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society). I'm sure you feel all authoritative with your federal AMATEUR license and all. Tell everyone you are "federally authorized." Invite your friend and neighbors in to view your mighty license certificates (suitable for framing). Feel proud for you are a MORSEMAN! [god of radio, ruler of the ham-ways, etc., etc., etc.]

There are a great many meowers, and very few of you. You are notable for being an extremely boring and impertinent mission poster (as witness your snecking of AUK and the nose, as well as RRAP), which is one well-known type of k00k, and you are now being held accountable to Teh Court of MEOW. Your mission is a failure, and RRAP will be occupied for the foreseeable future, until such a time as we(tinw) see fit to leave the group alone. This may or may not mean RRAP will receive the famous "smoking crater" treatment, but be assured that such remains a possibility.

Yeah, right. Usenet is usenet, off usenet is off usenet, and people who take usenet things off usenet can be taken quite seriously by cops everywhere. Look up "Emmett Earl Gulley", sometime.

You've gone on about him so much that I think he may (co-)own you -- especially if, as has been mentioned, he hasn't posted since 2000. You would be wise to drop the subject of Woger. Particularly if you don't win

Ever hear of the second harmonic? Not only is the field strength of your fundamental signal regulated, so are all of its harmonics. The FCC monitors regularly check harmonic radiation out, and I think you will get cited for that one too, which I think is kewl. And then there are the local CBers who use channels 12 and 13 who are hearing your harmonic splatter. They won't wait for official action; they'll come and visit you themselves.

In message <1157253137.159768.267560@74g2000cwt.googlegroups.com>, N9OGL bragged about his radio station with the claim, "the stations far away say there is no signal but the audio is really good."

No..."Omega One Radio" is a pirate station. And even if it were within Part 15 limits, it STILL would not be a "broadcast station".

Morkie, I will conceed that you know two things that I will never know...What it's like to lick my excrement off of another man's genitals, and the going welfare rates in Michigan.

Enjoy your win.

Wah! Wah! Wah! Boo fricken Hoo... the mean old coder is picking on me... Get a life! Anyone that can get that emotional over not getting their way has more issues than not being able to copy code.

You may want to consult a mental health worker...

Jimmie Noserve showed up with his bimonthly Numbers (his period on?)...still trying to "prove" that Technician class licensees aren't really no-coders. :-)

Robeson showed up wondering who "Robesin" is...only proving that the poor guy can't realize it is himself. He always was illiterate in regards to alliteration.

>Welp, if Fred had a tour in Ohio as an Army recruiter back in the 70s...

Ya know, that always bothered me. Why would an ex-NAVY person be "recruiting for the ARMY"? [explanation for the trash-mouth newcomers: Robesin once claimed - in here - that was what his late father did, but didn't say when or exactly where] The Army has always used active-duty Army NCOs for such tasks since before 1973 (the ending of the "Draft"). Strange LIE by Robeson, must have been done at time of some bad goods he swiped out of the Sharps box.

A "Sharps box" is colloquial term for a plastic container (usually wall mounted) for biological waste in medical facilities, sometimes referred to as just a "Sharps." Made by B. D. Sharps company and not affiliated with the dullness of the pro-coders. They can be seen in most doctors' offices and hospitals all over the country.

Robesin is going to come back and say "it's not nice to talk about medical things" as if he is some kind of code caduceus bearing "judge" of medicine. :-) He is a nurse (probably using a wastebasket-salvaged 1983 edition "Physician's Desk Reference" as his medical terminology guide). If he REALLY wanted some REAL rank, he could devote the next 9 years of his life to add MD after his name and honestly say he "saves lives." Tsk, he can't save his own life from the disease of impersonation. May a colony of helicobacter pylori set up housekeeping in his duodenum! :-) [he can share that with papa Fred] Freddie baby is prolly setting up a spittle session in here bitching and bad-mouthing anyone who doesn't want to relive times past a half-century ago when Kode was King. We'll see what his kind of foaming-at-the-mouth trash talk against "no-coders" will be. :-) interest that he still does that of course he still goes on when he does post about being robbed in "incentive licensing" back roughly 50 years there was the real mistake and all the result of the ARRL's power being misused, everything since has been trying to clean up the mess that caused

Tell before that point what was the Code test speed reqrired for the General License? some where I recall it being 5 wpm

I don't think Robeson could cut it leaving ot the issue of could Robeson do the courework (I am not surre

I could) he could never survive the process with his temper he'd blow somewhere and likely kill some one (either by fucking up or flat out murder) he dropped out of Nursing school by his own admission (maybe he was asked to leave who knows)

Dude - trust me, if the FCC wants to burn your ass - they will - and I don't care what "color", "religion", etc - you may be. I've seen them burn people of both races for HUGE dollars - more than once. The same guy twice too, for his ignorance to obey the rules. You aren't but a pimple on the governments ass. And they'll pick you off just like anyone else. Go ahead and play your "card". I'll watch for your name in the FCC Digest soon. In case you don't know it, they divulge ALL violators in this digest for all to see. Fines, actions, etc. GO FOR IT.
I can use some good reading material come fall. NEVER SAY NEVER - cause when ya least expect it, they'll be knocking on your door.

Correction, Mark, Blow Code likes lots of BS. :-)

He also wants lots of attention and might want to be the successor to that military impostor Robeson.

Actually 16 years ago (1990) but the movement to end the morse code testing for AMATEURS had begun much earlier than that.

Prior to the opening of the Internet to the public in 1991
the ARRL could retain attornies in DC to promote Hiram Percy's ideals of morsemanship. [paid for by ARRL members] However, no-code-test advocates did manage to get their Petition into the NPRM stage in 1990. That passed into LAW in 1991 and the rabid morsemen have been frothing at the mouth over it ever since.

Interestingly enough, the ARRL had to retain a lobbyist organization after the Internet went public...in addition to the law firm on retainer. [also paid for by ARRL members] The competition for the FCC's ear had grown now that amateurs could "talk" to the FCC directly instead of being filtered through the ARRL. Rightly so since the ARRL membership has never been more than a quarter of all licensed US radio amateurs. Democratic principles in action for this republic, not the monopolistic pseudo"representation" of a minority group organization.

>he is going to whine for another 50 year or till he drops dead

Has Blow Code ever identified himself by callsign?

Blow Code is more likely just one of the 'others' under a new pseudonym. Either that or the pro-code-testers are just all parroting the ARRL dicta (or is that "papal encyclical'?) from the Church of St. Hiram in Newington.

My take on that is the monotonic beeping did it. :-)

Rabid morsemen reject all communications outside of their very tight little RF spectra and sing praises of their very narrowband mental viewpoints. Maybe that's what they think is "intellectualism." :-)

Or, it may be some undiscovered malady in their brain which also keeps them from advancing beyond their mental youth. They can't think "outside their box" but then few morsemen can think inside the box containing their radio circuitry. It seems that anything other than their twitching fingers carressing their code keys is some mysterious, alien "force" in those radio boxes, a deep mystery to them. The signs pointing to that are their inability to talk technical other than parroting (again)
the ARRL information spoon-fed them. That lack of self-confidence or insecurity may lead to their defensive
"we are better than you!" shouting about their beloved psycho-motor skill of morsemanship.

Gotta love their LACK of technical details, all the time praising to the skies of their narrowband signals yet an almost utter lack of understanding Shannon's Law, the universal relationship of message rate, random noise, information error, and bandwidth. Maybe they can't THINK faster than 20 to 40 words per minute? :-)

US amateur radio appears to be quite alive and well today.
That despite the ARRL's insistence that all amateurs should emulate the standards and practices of the 1930s.
Instead of trying to take a neutral, hands-off policy on code testing, the ARRL ought to look at itself and the reason they can't get membership from the three-quarters of all amateur licensees in the USA. That majority IS the future of US amateur radio, not the frozen-in-their-youth delusions of some olde-tyme morsemen.

That mold isn't so much warped as just OLD. It was fine in 1930 but 1930 is 76 years ago.

Jimmie Noserve got hopeless when he tried to be some kind of "informed insider" into the aerospace business here and his attempts to "correct" REAL military veterans. He also tried to foist off his old "$100 rig" as his own design but it was really a near-copy of the "HBR" series that began in QST years ago.
Jimmie made the mistake of posting on that (relatively new website) showing his HBR version, the very same photos he had in a link posted here when he claimed it was all "original."

Tsk, that won't stop the "investment" olde-tymers...they will be

I don't think the ARRL "betrayed the ARS". I believe that they sincerely thought that morsemanship was THEN a topmost skill of US radio amtaeurs. Fifty years ago would be 1956 and not long after the passing of ARRL co-founder (and president-for-life) Hiram Percy Maxim. "T.O.M." used his editorial pages to promote morsemanship in the 1920s and 1930s.

The original core group of the ARRL were go-getters and smart enough to realize that, to make enough money as an organization that came out on top, PUBLICATIONS were the key to survival.
ARRL was first a very small group of local New Englanders, formed 5 years after the first (and still surviving) national organization, the Radio Club of America. There were lots of "national club" competitors in the 1920s but those eventually dropped out. RCA still exists but is not much concerned with amateur radio.

Prior to the Internet going public in 1991, the only major presence for US amateur radio in DC was the legal firm on retainer from the ARRL. ARRL kept promoting themselves as "representative" allegedly for the amateur to the FCC but suspiciously more like a "filter" of amateurs' opinions.
That changed dramatically once the FCC got their website going and ramped up to take Comments electronically. The ARRL had to retain a second firm in DC for lobbying.

The evidence is an observation of the number and kind of Comments on 98-143 "restructuring" versus Comments on all those Petitions and last year's NPRM concerning code testing elimination. The pro-code-test advocates' Comments were straight out of the League hymn book about morsemanship with a few adding in nebulous advantages for "homeland security" necessities! [those Petitions began after 11 Sep 01]

What is more telling about the League's stubbornness on their pro-code-test stance is that the IARU took a firm stand on changing the ITU-R amateur radio regulations compulsory (by administrations) morse testing for any license having below-30-MHz privileges...the IARU wanted it OPTIONAL by all administrations (at their discretion) a good year BEFORE WRC-03. The ARRL wanted to keep the compulsory regulation. After WRC-03 the League took a neutral stance, neither for nor against code testing in the USA. It's still a "ARRL versus the World" situation.

It should be abundantly clear that "Incentive Licensing" was never about "advancing" in amateur radio beyond getting TITLE, RAND, and STATUS. That was VERY important to the controlling coterie of the League, folks who wanted to be "better" than others...in a hobby activity.

What "incentive licensing" DID create was just the opposite of "good fellowship" among amateurs, that of CLASS DISTINCTION and a "pecking order" based largely on morsemanship. The morsemen won it. Never mind that radio technology was already far advanced from the 1930s' style of amateur radio and that morse code was falling by the wayside in every other radio service, the League still (stubbornly) held to the belief that all amateurs "should" be able to be morse skilled...even four decades after the 1930s.

The League lobbied for and got the "vanity license" system so that olde-tymers could get their 1x2 and 2x1 super-special guru-status callsigns. Even more status symbolism. Combining "vanity" calls and "incentive licensing" there was a perfect setup for all who managed to get both to crow and holler they WERE BETTER than all others. Good fellowship went out the window...rank, status, title RULED.

That's all they have left in this new millennium, Mark.

Some of them, such as Blow Code and Hambrecht still think they are "better than others" in all aspects, not just morsemanship. They LIKE that. So much so that they are in great personal fear of losing that very precious rank, status, title, and privilege that MIGHT happen if the code test is eliminated. They will LOSE their "better than you" rationalization. Internally the sky will have fallen on their self-perceptions.

Personally, I think radio and electronics is totally fascinating. So much so that I made a career choice of it while studying for an entirely different sort of work. Professional work, not some amateur dabbling, yet I liked to make electronic things in my home workshop. Things other than work-related tasks. It is FUN, personally rewarding, not "work."

I got into Big Time HF comms 53 1/2 years ago and have seen what modes DO work well and on a 24/7 basis on long-haul circuits that HAD to be kept working. Years later some KID is trying to "moralize" me into "working on morsemanship?" He (or she) can go shove it somewhere...until he (or she) can prove they've done more than I in radio communications...which they have NOT done yet in here.

Once, a very long time ago, I thought that becoming a
"ham" was a cool deal. That was before the commsats, before technology had fully gotten with the semiconductor era, before the wonderful way we can get over most of the world via PCs and the Internet. Why IS it that some have to be a grand champion of the 1930s over seven decades later? What are THEY trying to prove? I could care less about 1930s technology and the "radio standards" of then. I live in the NOW. If some dumbshit wants to moralize about "working" and "investing" he (or she) can go get some flagellation and suffer themselves for their own "cause." I'm not about to join him (or her) in such moralistic self-abuse/mis-use. If these self-styled emperors want to flap their new clothes in my direction, I'll just keep on pointing out that they are NAKED (and ugly).

Worf was the Klingon officer on TNG and DS9. He has nothing to do with this thread which is about people who want to get something for nothing.

Todd doesn't want to do the hard work necessary to get a real broadcast license, so he starts up a pirate station which is very likely to be operating illegally, thanks to Todd's ignorance and bullheadedness.

We want the FCC to investigate him and then to take him down if his station is illegal. People can't just get on the air because they feel like it. That's why the FCC was created.

Similarly, you want the amateur licensing rules changed so that you don't have to do any work to get on HF. The thought of you on HF makes me shudder. Wiseman is already bad enough, and you'd be even worse. Just look at how you behave on usenet.

The FCC thought so too - well into the 1970s.

Maxim died in 1936. 1956 was twenty years later.

He also promoted many other things on those pages, such as technical progress, operating skills, public service, and the observance of government regulations.

Publications were one way to support the organization. They also supported amateur radio by offering low-cost information specifically for the radio amateur.

> ARRL was first a very small group of local New Englanders,

But it didn't stay that way for long. By the time of the 1917 shutdown - just three years after ARRL was founded - it was a national organization.

One of the cofounders, Charles H. Stewart, 3ZS, lived right here in Radnor, PA. Hardly "local" in those days.

It is a very small organization whose main activities seem to be honorary and historical.

There was nothing to stop others from doing the same thing. Nor from contacting FCC directly.

Why are you suspicious, Len? Anyone could petition the FCC directly,
and many did, long before the Internet and ECFS.

All ECFS did was to make it easier to petition and comment.

Back in the 1960s, when the changes known as "incentive licensing" were being debated, FCC received over 6000 comments from individuals and groups. There were at least 10 proposals besides the ARRL's. Those other proposals were taken seriously enough by FCC to get RM numbers.

The fact is that the majority of individuals who commented supported the retention of at least some Morse Code testing. The majority also supported elimination of the Morse Code test for the General Class license.

Not true! Not true at all, Len.

The fact is that way back in 2000 or 2001, the ARRL BoD changed their policy wrt S25.5. They decided to neither support nor oppose changes to ITU-R S25.5.

Given the strong support from many other member countries to change
S25.5, the ARRL's no-opinion policy pretty much guaranteed there would be majority support to change S25.5.

> After WRC-03 the League took a neutral stance, neither for > nor against code testing in the USA. It's still a "ARRL > versus the World" situation.

Wrong again, Len!

In ARRL's petition to FCC, they proposed eliminating the Morse Code test for General but retaining it for Extra.

The majority of individuals commenting on the NPRM wanted the test eliminated for General.

The majority of individuals commenting on the NPRM wanted the test retained for Extra.

The two majorities are not composed of all the same individuals, but they are majorities.

"RAND"?

Do you mean Remington Rand, Ayn Rand, or the South African monetary unit?

> That was VERY important to the controlling

Nope. That's not what it was about at all, Len. Do try to get your history straight.

The fact is that the "incentive licensing" changes were an attempt to return to a system something like that which existed before February 1953. The complexity of the final result was due in large part to it being pieced together from the numerous non-ARRL proposals mentioned earlier.

btw, the 1951 restructuring that gave us the license classes with names rather than letters was not primarily driven by ARRL.

How many other radio services used Morse Code in 1966, Len?

Was there a shortage of trained radiotelegraphers during the Vietnam War?

Well, maybe they are, Len. Or maybe they aren't.

Why does it bother you so much?

Do you have a need to look down on everyone?

How will any currently licensed amateur lose anything if the Morse Code test is eliminated?

How?

If they really are better than you, they'll still be better without the test. And vice-versa.

Does being paid for something make someone automatically "better", Len?

But not rewarding enough for you to get an amateur radio license, it seems.

Or have you gotten that Extra out of its box, as you told us you were going to do, way back on January 19, 2000?

> I got into Big Time HF comms 53 1/2 years ago and have

Using equipment supplied and paid for by others. With a team of several hundred people trained to do the job.

That doesn't make you more qualified to judge what amateurs do - self-funded and largely self-trained.

I see.

What if someone older than you, with more radio experience, told you that you should work on your morse code skills? How would you react?

Perhaps they are simply holding up a mirror.....

Gee, Len, it's been more than three years since the ITU treaty changed.
Some countries have eliminated Morse Code testing, some haven't, and at least one (Canada) has worked out a unique solution to the debate.
Meanwhile the USA rules on the subject haven't changed since 2000.

Are you frustrated because your will has not become law...yet?

Gee, Len....do you think posting that way will cause people to change their minds and agree with you?

Do you think FCC would be convinced by such arguments?

Is that sort of posting your idea of how a "professional" behaves?

and therby betraying the fundental core of the service, a change that needs to removed altogether if possible hence my fovoring a oe 2 class license system with the prevedlges indentical to all the lclasses that exist (with modern radio I reconize it may be needed to have some sort

So I don't have to worry that I'm the only one x-poasting to RRAP.

You keep saying that as though it has an actual meaning from one usenetter to another, even ignoring the spelling.

That's what _you_ think. Your group isn't up for it -- just you. Hence, the x-poasting to RRAP won't be stopping anytime soon. Unless sometime between next year and 2015 (if you're lucky) is "soon".

How do you know it's Woger? Been exchanging words with him on radio, too?

> woger comes up when woger comes up

Mostly when you bring him up, or when one of his possible socks makes an appearance.

> gay basher you ar since all thosethat do the will of a gay basher like

Since it hasn't been proven that Woger is in fact still posting to usenet, I'll just ignore that, since I've /been/ gaybashed, in the past (IRL).

Which means you completely moved away from the subject. It was expected, based upon your posting history. You are the weirdest person posting to these newsgroups these days.

Congratulations. There are few people who can be stranger than Wiseman, but you manage it consistently.

For that careless comment cadet Hagar you are demoted back to the rank of junior cadet 2nd grade. Officer Bohne I'll have you know is one of the finest net respected Science Team Officers, 1st Bridge Assistant Commander, good loyal friend, and next in line to assume total command of the entire Earth Star Science Team. If you wish to make rank hold your tongue and respect your senior Officers least you wind-up like Saul and the sidewalk guy, banished, ridiculed, or stowfiled and bending over for them.

Any new visitors to the group would like to help.

Send this to the ARRL and the FCC. Thanks

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Step 5: Cancel your league membership until they decide to work with us to improve the service.

Thanks

They just want to be appliance operators Fred, they don't care if they can't commute. They want to pick up a microphone and start gabbing. A ham

I try to help motivate you radio wise, and don't argue with you on other things not related to radio. Like, if you want to believe you were in the army that's okay by me, I won't argue with you on that. And if you're happy being a Faggot, more power to ya. But I'd like to see you make some something of yourself in ham radio so people with stop teasing you radio wise.

If they still tease you over your retarded queer-ass make believe army veteran story, I can't help you with that.

Not only that, but the song selection is shitty which makes Omega One doubly stinky. ELO, Culture Club, J Giles Band, Disco, The carpenters, Asia, and then on top of that shit, a bunch of really really shitty old
Lawrence Welk like shit that he probably has to play just to keep his mom & dad from pulling the plug on his kilowatt.

Heck, Jim, you're going to ruin one of Leonard's rants. Stewart, as I

Len is suspicious of the League's elections of Directors too. Len is suspicious of a number of things in which he isn't involved.

Correct. It also saved a stamp. In the case of a number of Len's comments, it saved him lots of stamps.

You know--the ARRL hymnal. It's filled with songs rallying government to the ARRL. Len's sense of the surreal is working overtime.

It is obviously a reference to the Rand Corporation--all very hush hush.
It is abundantly clear that Len's mind is made up. He KNOWS what incentive licensing was about.

Len shouldn't confuse the Vanity Callsign System with the earlier FCC decisions, beginning in 1968 to award 1x2 calls to those who held the Extra and had been licensed for a certan number of years. That was later modified to include any Extra Class licensee without a minimum number of years licensed. There was no periodic fee charged for those callsign changes. That it chafes Len, is tough.

Perhaps in Len's mind, it did.

Len still hasn't opened the box to obtain any amateur radio license.
He's been carping in this newsgroup for a decade or so and inertia rulez.

There are those doing something in which Len is not a participant. Some of those who are participants are perceived by Len to have rank, status and privilege. In amateur radio, Len would have to begin as all did--at the bottom. He'd have no rank, status or privilege for quite some time. There'd be those who would think they were "better" than him. There are others who'd actually BE better than him. The thought chafes him. Len isn't an instant anything in amateur radio. He isn't yet a neophyte.

Precisely. They'll also have much more experience in amateur radio than Leonard H. Anderson. Those who are proficient in the use of Morse, will always be a leg up on Leonard.

...and you'll note that Len is back to talking careers. That's one of the wonderful things about amateur radio. One can work in something quite far afield from radio and still have a rich and rewarding experience in amateur radio. One of my local friends works at a funeral home. One works as a jail guard. One is a retired teacher. All find much enjoyment in amateur radio.

It apparently does, unless it something made through dabbling in his

It is always Big Time in the Len recounting. At least he has dropped the claim that HE worked 24/7. My personal experience with PROFESSIONAL long haul circuits that HAD to be kept working is that they don't always. When a healthy solar flare comes along, you might as well mail

In addition to that, what about the fact that he is paying for internet service and that invariably, that internet circuit goes through wires somewhere? The cellular telephone is a wonderful thing too, but it isn't a substitute for amateur radio. It'd be pricey too.

Interesting. In a subsequent post, you use the following:

"Lots of inbreeding going on in the morsemen ranks."

"I wonder where Jimmy Noserve is hiding?"

"Jimmie Noserve showed up with his bimonthly Numbers (his period on?)"

"Robeson showed up wondering who "Robesin" is..."

"Well, Robesin IS a PRETENDER to be sure..."

You blew in here after a lengthy absence and immediately began ad hominem attacks and denigration. You're a wind bag, Len, and you aren't a participant in amateur radio.

How much ego is considered "over-inflated", Len? We're not dealing with professional radio communications here, so you may can the speech. I know quite a number of amateur radio ops who have contempt for you. Let's call it even.

Forever? I don't know of anyone who says that morse testing must remain forever. Did you mean to write that no one has made a case which suits your personal standards of validity? No one ever could. Your mind was made up when you began. You weren't here to debate; you were here to lecture.

Your wild claims are simply malarkey. Would you do us the courtesy of naming any other U.S. amateur radio organization which has even 5% of licensed radio amateurs as members?

PUBLIC pressure? How many of the general public have commented, let alone pressured? Do you think your own endearing style has swayed the Commission?

Nontheless, he's a radio amateur, something you'll likely not achieve before you end up with empty, cold, dead fingers. Thusfar in this new millenium, you have an old, dusty, tiny Johnson to work with.

So what you've told us is that while I was employed, I was looking for work. Good work, Len. That's correct. I did a fair amount of hiring though. I read resumes/CVs, selected candidates to be interviewed, interviewed them, broke the bad news to the unsuccessful ones and the good news to the successful ones. I wrote their efficiency reports and conducted periodic counseling.

Sure, I am. I provided a defintion of same, correcting your erroneous claim. I've done quite a bit of that when you've been in error.

Trash-talk? You were corrected when you were mistaken.

Absolutely correct! Heil is a radio amateur and you are not. Heil knew the definition of CV. You did not.

Nobody does. State never had a large radio network.

That's as incorrect as your idea on the term "CV".

I was somebody in a group of radio amateurs before I ever took that job, Foghorn. :-)

No, Leonard, it is not.

Heil is big on that because he wanted to do it. It is a very big deal if one intends to communicate with others using morse.

> What is before the FCC right now is

You told us that what the FCC says, goes. The FCC has retained morse testing at the 5 wpm level for an HF amateur radio license.

> Heil has his license through morsemanship.

That's as incorrect as your claim about "CVs" or State Department radio.
Heil has his license through passing each and every testing element available, morse and written. Deal with it. How's your "Extra right out of the box" coming along?

Incorrect again, O one of limited vision.

Forget the "bigger world of radio comms" stuff, Leonard. Those attempting to pass an amateur radio exam are intested in becoming hams.
At HF and in VHF/UHF weak signal work, morse is still widely used.

You, not a participant in amateur radio, insist that morse testing must

You get very little correct. I was never assigned to MARS anywhere. My concerned with my tour in Vietnam? It has as much relevance to amateur radio and your stories of "Big Time HF" army radio of better than a half-century back. I was a radio amateur long before entering the military, Len. I was a schoolboy of 14 and I obtained something which stymies certain people in their eighth decade of life.

May I be so bold as to ask what Len's credentials are insofar as having been a member of the Military? No, his days as a Civil Servant working at an Air Force base in Mississippi count for nil. We all know how Len performed while there. He had a penchant for posting to numerous Newsgroups while using his employers' computers and yeah, had several times posted comments over the callsign of an Amateur with whom he had past differences.
Len has, for a short while anyway, seemingly stopped posting over the callsign of this unsuspecting Amateur, but ONLY because of one, astute Usenet watchdog who likes to "out" Len.
In my humble opinion, any veracity that Len may have had went down the proverbial tubes when he stooped so low as to post not once, but numerous times over the callsign of this unsuspecting (and undeserving) Amateur. His actions were not only uncalled-for, but were childishly tawdry.
This alone speaks volumes of Lennie....

Interesting. In a subsequent post, you use the following:

"Lots of inbreeding going on in the morsemen ranks."

"I wonder where Jimmy Noserve is hiding?"

"Jimmie Noserve showed up with his bimonthly Numbers (his period on?)"

"Robeson showed up wondering who "Robesin" is..."

"Well, Robesin IS a PRETENDER to be sure..."

You blew in here after a lengthy absence and immediately began ad hominem attacks and denigration. You're a wind bag, Len, and you aren't a participant in amateur radio.

I have stations check the harmonics for me and there isn't any harmonics...nice try though

Well, L let me tell you a few things.....I will continue to run this station, and I WILL fight the FCC on this....After all why should I Apply for a license if the FCC isn't going to consider my application and waivers?? and believe my, I've applied many times from many different types of broadcast license. I know a few individuals on the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications (The FCC BOSS) who agree with me on this. So let the Facist Communication Commission (FCC) come after me, we go to the court and they will have to explain themsleves to the judge, why they didn't consider my seven application and seven waivers, after the Federal Courts told them they had to consider waivers. The FCC will also have to explain to a judge why they put outa bulletin that is misleading and the fact the power output for Part 15 is in the nanowatt (not milliwatts like so many believe) and the fact the FCC has gone to the Federal courts claiming that a person could run a Part 15 broadcast station, when in fact the power is so so low that as the FCC put it in a ORDER back in 1974 "part 15 is not designed for broadcasting due to it extremely low power.) So let see the FCC explain to the Judge why they fucking lied all these years about those things.

HEY STUPID FUCK, I've applied Seven times for a broadcast license with waivers. The FCC wouldn't consider my application or waiver so you and your little bitches at the FCC "bring it on" let's see them go in front of judge and explain why they didn't consider my application or waivers after the fucking courts told them to do so. Like I told some members of the House subcommittee on Telecommunication why the hell should I continue to apply for a license with waiver if their (TheFCC) isn't going to consider them?? it's a waste of time and money...So like I said bring on bitch!!

Careful, careful, Mark...Sister Nun of the Above, now the Mother SUPERIOR is BACK, ruler in hand, ready to spank the knuckles of anyone who DARES say anything negative about the blessed, sacred ARRL!

I was literally going back 50 years to 1956 and remembering how both the electronics hobby and the (much, much bigger) electronics industry was doing...preparing to move to California and the aerospace industries that year. Frankly, the ARRL wasn't keeping up with the electronics industry

other than keeping QST afloat with advertising revenue.
Since they were largely unaware (from their publications)
what the (then) long-haul radio communications were doing, they couldn't really decide which way to go for amateurs.
Their decisions were based largely on ignorance, especially that of SSB. The commercial-military folks on HF were already USING SSB on HF and had been doing it for over two decades by 1956...yet the ARRL wanted amateurs to believe that "amateur radio 'pioneered' SSB." :-) Bullshit.

Well, it's a subject which is damn clear to outside observers but the Believers are about to strike a blow for the Church of St. Hiram. Mother SIPERIOR is back in her habit of one-liner sentences thinking she can slay the dragons (of her mind) which defile the sanctity of the Newington folks who "know what is good for amateur radio!" :-)

Prior to 1990 there were already FIVE different license classes in US amateur radio. The no-code Technician class made it SIX.
A decade later the FCC chopped that in half. Rightly so in my estimation. It had gotten literally Byzantine in structure with the privileged bandplans and who could use what mode. It was worse than the commercial-professional operator licenses. The Restructuring was sorely needed for the avocational activities.

The worst blow to the rank-status-title morsemen was cutting the code test rate down to a single, low one, well below the exhaulted, royal rate of 20 WPM that they overused for bragging rights before 1998. :-) Those extra super special morsemen lost NO PRIVILEGES ON THE BANDS but the sky fell in on their bragging rights. Boo-hoo, poor morsemen. :-)

I disagree with you a bit...nobody "owes" anything other than bill payments, Mark.

The rabid amateur morsemen are just full of themselves.
They have lost their ability to RULE by that singular skill, are now worried that they might lose all their rank, title, status, and privileges when the code test is finally eliminated. Few of them seem to have much for themselves beyond that bragging right. <shrug>

Ahem...Coslo's attempt at an amateur radio "forum" hasn't had a new posting since 20 Feb 06. Seven months of quiet.

Or maybe all the new posts got tangled with his "to the edge

Pure and simple bullshit, Mother. Prior to the 1990s the FCC was pressured constantly by just one amateur organization - the ARRL. Since amateur radio has NOT been a priority item on the FCC's tasks, the FCC just let the ARRL have what the ARRL wanted.
After all, the ARRL claimed it "spoke for the amateur" even though their membership was a minority of never more than a quarter of all licensees.

The ONLY way to support so many services that non-members could do themselves. Three years ago the reported profit of the ARRL to the IRS was 12 MILLION dollars. That kind of cash inflow does NOT come solely from membership.

Do YOU have a legal firm on retainer, Mother? Or do you have a dental retainer, hoping to "take a bite" out of your perceived anti-morse "crime?"

>> ARRL kept promoting themselves as

ARRL is NOT a government body. They are a private organization accountable to no one but themselves, yet they ACT like they are some exhaulted "representative" of ALL radio amateurs. [ARRL membership hasn't gotten more than a quarter of all amateur radio licensees in a long time...if ever]

ARRL represents ONLY the membership and that mambership is a MINORITY of all amateur radio licensees in the USA.

>Anyone could petition the FCC directly,
>and many did, long before the Internet and ECFS.

"Anyone" could but extremely few did. Spend some time in the Reading Room in DC and come back with your results.

Tsk, that was before your time, Mother, before you were Sister Nun of the Above. You are just paraphrasing another on that. Don't get your habit in a bind "reporting things" you weren't a part of.

>Given the strong support from many other member countries to change
>S25.5, the ARRL's no-opinion policy pretty much guaranteed there would

A NO-OPINION position is a face-saving trick. If the vote went one way, the ARRL could claim it "supported" it by "not opposing it." If the vote went the other way, the League was "not responsible" for it. It's a trick used in politics for years in many other endeavors.

>In ARRL's petition to FCC, they proposed eliminating the Morse Code

Mother, the ARRL's "Petition" (a rather rambling document) is public view. Do NOT tell me what it "was about."
Anyone can read it and judge for themselves. You are NOT needed as some "interpreter."

>The majority of individuals commenting on the NPRM wanted the test

Bullshit. It is CLEAR to anyone NOT a Believer

It is MUCH "straighter" than yours, Mother. I have MORE of history of ALL radio than you after you've been spoon-fed information dribbled out to you by the League.

of amateur radio licenses prior to "incentive licensing." :-)

Are you taking stage magician lessons? You've FAILED.

HOHOHOHOHOHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Mother, I didn't lay on the floor in the sign of the ARRL diamond to take a lifetime VOW in the Church of St. Hiram.

BWAAAAAAHEHEHEHEHEHEHEHEHE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I changed my mind, Jimmy Noserve. Several times before 6 1/2 years ago. Human beings with free will are allowed to do that. Really. I see NO point in re-creating "skills" of what was long ago and not used in the radio world today...other than by some amateurs play-acting "pioneering" long-dead technology. If you don't like that opinion, TS for you.

If I want to volunteer in emergency communications I will go to the California ACS. Ham license (from FCC or FDA) is not needed. I can do several things, all volunteer, which do NOT need manual telegraphy skills.
I don't need to do that since I know that the present City-County-State emergency communications are run well by regular staff, proven by REAL emergencies.

>Do you have a need to look down on everyone?

All that are shorter than I...at least to see them clearly wearing bifocals. :-)

Why are you looking down on professionals, Jimmy Noserve? Aren't you one of them? Or did you lose your job (whatever that was someplace)?

>How will any currently licensed amateur lose anything if the Morse Code >test is eliminated?

BRAGGING RIGHTS, sweetums. SELF-PERCEPTION as a mighty
"radio operator" (circa 1930s). Loss of the rabid olde-tyme morsemen's ability to LOOK DOWN ON ALL WHO DON'T CARE FOR MORSEMANSHIP.

Are you BLIND? Why can't you understand what I wrote?
Do you need Remedial English or what?

YOU do all of the above, desperately trying to disguise
it by attempting humiliation of all those who disagree with you.

Not beyond half a year at Art Center School of Design
(the old campus on 3rd Street, not the new one in Pasadena). Changing majors made me inelligible for G. I. Bill funding according to regulations at the time, according to the VA. "Call the VA," Jimmy.
"Call the VA!" BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!

No matter. I was employed in electronics in aerospace, good job. Self-learning allowed me to rise in the ranks to have design responsibility well before getting that sheepskin.

But, in 1957 YOU were NOT a "taxpayer," Jimmy.
I DID serve my country in the US Army. You NEVER served in any military branch of the United States, yet you are so very judgemental and SUPERIOR to those of us who did serve. You claim to be "expert" in things before your time, especially grand details of military action and realpolitic...just from READING about them.

"Several hundred people?!?" WTF, Jimmie Noserve, do you now insist on a TO&E breakdown? Incredible.

We've already HAD this discussion in here, Jimmy. ADA transmitters had less than a hundred personnel on four operating teams keeping the circuits running 24/7 on HF.
You need details? Go here:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

describes what I did, what others did, where and what it was. 6 MB file size, takes about 19 minutes download over dial-up.

YOU NEVER did anything close to that, Jimmie Noserve.
You are envious and trying to mask that envy. Be nice.

>That doesn't make you more qualified to judge what amateurs do - >self-funded and largely self-trained.

Sorry, sweetums, you are WRONG when you go into that song-and-dance. Talk to some of the ex-USN Chiefs about being "self-trained" on equipment "self-funded." :-) Not only that, but they got three hots and a cot plus pay.

Are you so ignorant that you think the US military communications operates like ham radio?!?!? Incredible.
Well, you've NEVER done that, so I have to cut you some slack. [MARS is NOT an example of regular military communications]

I'm NOT judgemental about "what amateurs do," sweetie, I'm talking about GETTING INTO amateur radio, the FEDERAL REGULATIONS pertaining to GETTING a license.

Unless there was a Revolution last night, the US government and the US Constitution still allows us CITIZENS to petition our government. Regardless of what you think/believe, amateurs do NOT "rule" US amateur radio nor have the final say-so on it. Really.

>Is youth somehow wrong, Len?

"Youth is wasted on the young." :-) Quote of someone...:-)

I enjoyed mine despite your making fun of it. :-)

YOU aren't young anymore, Jimmy. Face the fact. Time doesn't stand still for any of us. Living in the PAST as you love to do is your own delusion.

>What if someone older than you, with more radio experience, told you >that you should work on your morse code skills? How would you react?

I'd tell him flat out:

1. "Fuck off!"

2. "Get some mental help, dude, you are twisted."

Jimmie Noserve, you've NEVER had any military experience yet you keep on as if you did. Why is that? Arrogance?
Presumption of being "better" than those who served? Why?

Why do you believe YOU are so SUPERIOR that YOU can tell others what to do?

>Then why do you tell us so much about your past?

That's where you LOVE to live, Jimmie. I'm just trying to make you feel at-ease. :-)

You LOVE play-acting like you are "pioneering radio." Sorry, Jimmy, that was done long ago. By others. NOT
you.

>> If these self-styled emperors want to >> flap their new clothes in my direction, I'll just keep

>Perhaps they are simply holding up a mirror.....

Hardly. :-) What YOU don't like is MY mirror being held up to show YOU YOUR reflection. BOOO! :-)

>Are you frustrated because your will has not become law...yet?

Not really. Flipping others' paradigms takes a LONG time.
Especially those who've been thoroughly brainwashed by you-know-what organization. Why are YOU so edgy and combative about no-code-test-advocates' postings? You continue to attack bits and pieces of such postings well out of context, trying to divert attention from what we say. Yet you completely CONDONE identifiable garbage-mouths because of their amateur licenses requiring code testing. Looks to me like you are in FEAR of losing your bragging rights, possibly your beloved ARRL when the Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society fades away...replaced by new generations that don't care for your antiquated ideals.

Put the habit back on, Mother SUPERIOR. Go thee and say those 5000 Hail Hirams, then pray for your soul's redemption.

Poor Dave, he has this burning HATRED deep inside him against all who oppose his "foreign policy" viewpoints (anyone not federally licensed as an amateur is considered by him to be foreign).

Besides, "Mr. Ambassador" is used to BEING DX, bought and paid for by us taxpayers. He's had difficulty adjusting to ordinary life back in the United States where he is NOT DX? :-)

Fortunately (for the ecology) he is biodegradeable. We've

I agree but morsemen are revered in here and at the League.
To fault a morseman is to invite ever-lasting hatred of all that they hold holy. Nobody can enjoy communicating except by the "professional" protocol of constantly abbreviating everything in the "correct, approved" (since 1930s) morse form. Violate that and all are subject to everlasting purgatory of the anti-morse. :-)

We both know what Freddie displayed. No sense in repeating it. I agree that his demands do not put amateur radio in a good light, but some of those Bigots are very vocal and there seems to be some kind of "bigot morsemen's league" where none are chastised by their brotherhood. They seem to hold their bigotry in high regard, perhaps even as nobles.

I'd been led to believe that Marilyn Chambers ran on batteries. I Oooooo!!!! TROLL and a half!!! :-)

>May I be so bold as to ask what Len's credentials are insofar as having been >a member of the Military?

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

6 MB file size, takes about 19 minutes download over dial-up.

Also try /AlphabetSoup.pdf, similar in size, to see a copy of a brochure of the same facilities a few years afterwards (produced by the signal battalion I had been stationed to).

Now, what are YOUR credentials, "Tommy Edison?" :-)

Loved your light bulbs but you wanted DC instead of AC.
Bad choice.

>No, his days as a Civil Servant working at an Air >Force base in Mississippi count for nil.

Of course they are "nil." I've never ever worked in Civil Service, nor even as a servant. :-)

I've never been IN the state of Mississippi, let alone a USAF base there. Closest might be Michoud, LA, while working for Rocketdyne division of Rockwell International.

>We all know how Len performed while there.

I "performed?" On stage? :-)

Do you need to see my AFTRA card? :-)

>He had a penchant for posting to numerous Newsgroups while using his >employers' computers and yeah, had several times posted comments over the >callsign of an Amateur with whom he had past differences.

I did? What was this mysterious callsign?

Seeing as I'm self-employed but mostly retired, I use my own computers for computer-modem comms. I have four, two PCs and a couple of 8-bitters of early days.

I've never, ever tried to use anyone else's amateur radio callsign. If you look at issues of Ham Radio magazine you will see several articles with my byline on them; none of those bylines contain an amateur radio callsign.

>Len has, for a short while anyway, seemingly stopped posting over the >callsign of this unsuspecting Amateur, but ONLY because of one, astute >Usenet watchdog who likes to "out" Len.

A "watchdog?" Arf, arf! :-)

Other than seeming to be on some VERY heavy "stuff," your confusion MIGHT stem from a voluntary summary and statistics Comment made to the FCC on Docket 98-143. The compiler of that document confused my NAME with the callsign of another 'Leonard H. Anderson' who lives in Montana and does have an amateur radio license. I notified the compiler and cleared up the confusion...but the document remains with the FCC as-is and hasn't been corrected there. I live in southern California and have never met nor communicated with this other Anderson.

If you do a Search on the Internet you will find several 'Leonard Anderson" names. One is a USMC Major who recently finished a tour with the USN Blue Angels aerial demonstration team. Another is an actor in the Los Angeles area. My name comes up as a character in a Role-Playing Game of some future space-battle game; I forget which one and that is irrelevant.

>In my humble opinion, any veracity that Len may have had went down the >proverbial tubes when he stooped so low as to post not once, but numerous >times over the callsign of this unsuspecting (and undeserving) Amateur.

Identify who and where these postings occurred.

As I've said, I've never ever tried to, nor had any need to "impersonate" anyone in any newsgroup nor on any website.
I am secure in who I am and what I've done.

>His
>actions were not only uncalled-for, but were childishly tawdry.
>This alone speaks volumes of Lennie....

Tommie boy, you've just described yourself in your posting.

Now go crawl into a light bulb and think about your error in not choosing AC over DC. And stay off that hard stuff before your mind gets bent more than what you've shown here.

Congratulations on your 15th birthday in here. Was there a big party at your Internet Middle School in 2006? :-)

I didn't get my First 'Phone until age 23...didn't need one in the three years prior of keeping HF comms working.

MANY are "non-participants in amateur radio," Ambassador Heil.

Are THEY all "inferior" because they don't care for morse code?

Of course, YOU never ever did any ad hominem attacks on

You can be a ham, Mark, but only if you decide to make an effort to be one.
Dumbing down ham radio the way you want is like burning down the club house and selling the land to CB'ers.

I won't suggest stamp collecting for you Mark. You would probably whine that the little boxes where you paste the stamps are too small and you won't go any further until the post office makes bigger boxes, and that the problem is the big stamp collectors want stamp collecting to be like a frat house and squeeze out the little guy.

Well that explains everything. You want ham radio dumbed down because when you listen to it you don't know what the hams are talking about.

You want like a CB version of ham radio.

Ping real Hams,

You'll want to use CW if you ever have to save len Anderson, that should help him change his brain cell regarding the value of Morse.

I'm not fifteen. I'm fifty-seven. Don't you get anything right?

I was fourteen in 1963. That was forty-three years ago. I've been participating in amateur radio ever since. What's your holdup, Bub?

Who has been discussing commercial licenses, Leonard?

Why would it be one of my buddies? I didn't blow smoke about getting an "Extra right out of the box".

http://www.wordwebonline.com/en/STYMIE
quote

Verb: stymie (stymied,stymieing,stymies) stImee

1. Hinder or prevent the progress or accomplishment of
- obstruct, blockade, block, hinder, stymy, embarrass

Derived forms: stymied, stymieing, stymies

Type of: forbid, foreclose, forestall, obstacle, obstruction, position, preclude, prevent, situation
unquote

It works fine in describing your predicament.

I GOT it right, Len. If you've passed age 70, you're in your eighth decade. Better brush up on your math a bit. Don't you get anything right?

Sheesh!

That's exactly right. How many of them show up in an amateur radio newsgroup and act like a complete horse's ass?

They aren't here.

You've gotten what you've dished out. Your newsgroup supporters are a

I've already told you how it works. Sometimes there's a carrot and a stick. Sometimes there's just a carrot. Sometimes there's just a stick. That's it in a nutshell.

Why does it bother you that members see a perceived benefit and that they avail themselves of it? Why would it bother you that the ARRL produces publications and sells them?

In this day and age, 12 million dollars isn't a great sum for an organization the size of the ARRL. How much money does come from membership, Len? Would it be fair to say that membership dues make up 40% of the total? The League charges for things like DXCC applications, subsequent QSL card submissions, credits from LOTW and the like. These services are used by non-members as well as members. Do you believe the League should provide free services to non-members? What's your beef?

You aren't a member and aren't likely to be a member of the ARRL.

canyou get it through your head I have xero interest in Morse Code

if you could give me the abilty to read it I would not use it since I am not interested in what it offers

I have psent a good part of youth on the mode and I will waste no more time on it

I don't feel that Ham is CW, the FCC and the ARRL agree it isn't for the type of contacts I could make with CW I can make much the same contact using JT 65 modes which I have made afew moon bounce contacts and in creasing number of terreail contact using MS based proagation and all without having to listen to static. If I listen to static I want to hear a person not a machine be it computer or code key

I will can and will listen for the off chance of hearing either SOS or OSO if I hear either I boot up my CW reading program and try to help out if it apreas I can read the signal and no one is responding. a very unlikely event I suspect.

aside from that nothing could get to to use that mode. ona personal level I DO despise it and hope to hear its demise (by the volontary disuse of the ARS the last bastition of CW use) I may not live that long, but I have hopes

BTW calling some one lazy is just not a good way to get to them to do something you want them to to do

I'm just pointing out some plain, simple facts.

You are confusing Charles H. Stewart with Kenneth B. Warner. It was KBW who succeeded HPM.

KBW was a major part of ARRL from the early days until his death in the late 1940s. IMHO he was as important in the 1930s and 40s as Maxim was in the teens and 20s. KBW is just not as well known.

It should be remembered that, back in 1998, Len couldn't get ECFS to work for him and had to mail his comments to FCC. Meanwhile, thousands of us whom he denigrates had no problem filing comments online, even then.

However, the most likely outcome is that FCC will just drop Element 1 completely. The surprising thing is that it has taken so long.

I disagree!

Remington Rand wasn't part of Len's CV.

Ayn Rand promoted her philosophy of Objectivism, which demanded strict adherence to reality, not the surreal. Also, a core value of Objectivism was the value of the individual and individual accomplishment. Not something Len likes to acknowledge, unless it's his personal value and accomplishment.

OTOH, Len's value system places a high value on being a "professional" (meaning being paid for something) and how much material wealth a person has amassed (so they can pay CASH for things like Japanese-made general-coverage receivers).

So it must be the South African rand...

Of course Len does not know where it actually came from...

Massage or mangle?

Fact is, ARRL proposed in 1963 that there be no additional code testing for full privileges - just an additional written test.

Let's see...there were the military, particularly the US Navy and Coast Guard, the maritime services, various government agencies, some press services, and of course amateur radio.

Actually, there were forms of "vanity" callsigns long before 1968. In fact, if you search qrz.com, you may still be able to find amateurs with 1x2 callsigns who are not Extras.

That's how I got N2EY in 1977. I simply asked FCC for a 1x2 when I moved to New York State, and it was sequentially issued. I'd been an Extra for seven years by then.

Actually there's a bit more to it than that.

If you recall, Len once set out to get an amateur license, and reportedly got up to 7 or 8 wpm before he gave up on learning Morse Code.

You see, learning Morse Code was "hard work" for Len back then.

He's apparently one of those folks who does "book learnin'" rather easily - let him read something and he'll lecture you on it endlessly.
Some of what he says will actually be right, too.

But learning Morse Code to the 13 wpm level needed for a General license turned out to be not so easy for Len, so he has held a grudge about it for decades.

Now you may wonder why, if Len could do 7 or 8 wpm at one point, he didn't just get a Novice license, and improve his Morse Code skills by operating, as most of us did.

The answer should be obvious: No way would Len allow himself to be classified as a "Novice". That license did not carry the appropriate title or status for him.

So what? People have all kinds of skills, experience, etc. I'm sure there are things where Len has more experience/knowledge/skill than I, and things where I have more experience/knowledge/skill than he.

The former doesn't bother me, but the latter seems to bother him no end.

An outsider by choice. There has been a US amateur radio license with no Morse Code test for the past 15-1/2 years. All other classes of US amateur radio license have required only a 5 wpm code test since 2000.

Exactly. Amateur radio is "radio for its own sake".

In case you've forgotten, Len did some writing for the now-defunct amateur radio magazine "ham radio". He got paid for those articles, of course. None of his articles were actual projects, though.

"hard work", actually. That's why he gave up on it.

Looks like a deep seated insecurity on Len's part, though.

Oh yes - something about his difficulty including them in what he sees as an adult activity. Also, he proposed a minimum age requirement for an amateur license even though he had absolutely no evidence of problems caused by the licensing of young people. Then there's his accusating the ARRL and some VEs of "fraud" in licensing some young children.

It was one of the most disgusting, repulsive things I've ever seen posted on RRAP. And he presents hisself as being Mr Uprightiousness.
Ha!

He has a mouth full of excerement, complaining about others having a mouth full excrement.

And no negative comments from the Code Crew, so it must be OK with them.

That reminds me. There was a No-Coder named Val that talked up the Code and they all loved him. He was the Darling of RRAP. I wonder if he ever learned the code?

Sort of like "honor among theives."

Anyway, I ran Val's info on QRZ.com, and he's still a Technician. Maybe he's a "PLUS," probably not. He played all the morsemen but they don't mind as long as he was talking the talk, he don't have to walk the walk. Moral of the story: play lip service to their fetish and you'll get along just fine.

Actually, there were six classes of amateur radio licenses in the USA from 1951 until the mid-1970s. They were Novice, Technician, General, Conditional, Advanced and Extra.

In the mid-1970s the Conditional was phased out. When a Conditional was renewed or modified, the FCC changed the license class to General.

The number of amateur radio license classes in the USA remained at 5 until the Technician Plus lucense was created in the early 1990s.

Those are the plain and simple facts, Len.

You don't really know what caused the 1951 restructuring, do you, Len?

I didn't think so.

Was the Conditional actually a class of license or a method of taking the exam? What priveleges did it convey? Why do some OF's state that they had a General when, in fact, they held the Conditional license?
Was there shame associated with the Conditional license?

Hmmmm? Almost interesting.

> The number of amateur radio license classes in the USA remained at 5

False. The Technician with 5wpm code ran concurrently with the Technician license without code. That lasted for about two years, then we got the "Plus" as a marker for the code accomplished.

But then the strangest thing happened. It went back to "Technician" and you have to keep track of your code "accomplishment" yourself.
Doesn't sound like the FCC values the code "accomplishment" all that much.

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.

(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!
(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet. Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.

Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.
Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity.
You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.
If doing something results in the loss of your account, legal hassles, or blunt trauma injury, do it again. It always works better the second time.

Asterisks, lots and lots of Asterisks.
Poking holes in kookscreed is stalking, and is a felony.
K00ks LOVE to "connect the dots". They are, of course, dots that only the k00k can see.
"They laughed at Einstein, too!"

Lennie, Lennie, LENNIE!

How SOON you FORGET!

You let that license EXPIRE back in October 0f 2000 ! ! !

Or so you said!...Of course every Amateur Licensee except Morkie and Brain jumped on you for that...Knowing full well that GROLs do NOT "expire" until YOU expire.

Of course it's YOU who is always chiding Amateurs for not knowing anything other THAN Amateur Radio, which is a pretty stupid claim...But then you ARE pretty stupid.

And here you are spreading some more of that "stupid" around....

Silly Lennie...Tricks are for kids!

You mean like you, Brian "The Brain" P Burke, N0IMD?

You keep presuming to tell us all about how people should act, speak to each other, and generally conduct ourselves in public forums...Then you goes right on ahead and do EXACTLY what you suggests others should not...

Some call that two faced. I have a couple names for it, none of which I care to repeat in a public forum.

I'd put a bullet in your ear if you tried, Morkie.

But thanks for proving to everyone here what I've been saying about your grossly inadequate English comprehension skills.

The sentence had nothing do do with you doing anything to me.

Why? You're the liar with the pant's on fire, Morkie...And since you're gay, I have no worries about Amy's combustability.

Your lack of denial about taking welfare noted...as if it were in OMFGss, that was hard to read.

No, we(tinw) are not, as it happens. Each kookologist in AUK is solely responsible for his or her own actions, and we(tinw) do no one(tinno) else's bidding. You earned the Golden Killfile nom based solely on your own boring, net.KKKopping output, not because PJR is just mean (he's actually a cool guy, and very funny), just as the entire group earned a BU nom based on /its/ output. Your group is a cesspit of usenet, and if some admin were to rmgroup it, all of perhaps two or three people would mourn its passing, not counting such vermin as Wabbit.

> I do hope you are happy about that

I really couldn't give a shit about your pissant group. Its regulars deserve to have someone stalk them down and kill them for being pathetic, homophobic wastes of space, speaking generally (DrDeath is definitely not counted, and Woger or his frogger certainly is), but as long as you're all posting there anyway, you might as well provide AUK with what few laughs are available from you, before you all jointly win the GK (which may take a few years) and are declared to be as net.dead as alt.snuh.

FCC considered it a different class of license until it was phased out.

> What priveleges did it convey?

Same operating privileges as General. However, over its history, the Conditional had some unique characteristics.

First off, you could only get a Conditional if you lived more than a certain distance from an FCC exam point, or were disabled enough to be physically unable to travel to an exam session. The Conditional distance changed a few times over the history of that license, and the amount of CONUS that was "Conditional territory" changed dramatically.

Second, until the mid-1950s, if a Conditional moved closer to an exam point than the Conditional distance, they had 90 days to show up at an FCC exam session and re-test for the General.

Third, the Conditional did not convey any test-element credit for higher class licenses. If a non-disabled Conditional wanted an Advanced or Extra, they had to get to an exam point, and would have to retake the General code and theory before being allowed to try the other exam elements.

> Why do some OF's state that > they had a General when, in fact, they held the Conditional license?

I don't know - ask them.

> Was there shame associated with the Conditional license?

Not that I know of. Why should anyone be ashamed of any class of license?

No, true.

The Technician Plus class was created in the early 1990s - about 1993.

1993 is the early 1990s. The Technician-without-code-test went into effect February 14, 1991.

> The Technician with 5wpm code ran concurrently with the That's right. From February 1991 to about mid-1993, both flavors of Technician were simply "Technician". It was left to the licensee to keep documentation.

> But then the strangest thing happened. It went back to "Technician"

> Doesn't sound like the FCC values the code "accomplishment" all that

Maybe not. However, note that:

- The FCC did create the Tech Plus license class

- The FCC could have reduced the code test requirement for all license classes to 5 wpm long before 2000, but they didn't. FCC even went through the additional complexity of medical waivers for a decade before reducing the code test requirement

- Despite all their pronouncements about code testing in the various NPRMs and R&Os, FCC has not yet changed the rules about code testing from those imposed in 2000. It's been more than three years since the treaty changed, yet they won't even say when they will make a decision.
If FCC doesn't value the Element 1 accomplishment, why have they retained it for so long?

Maybe changes to Part 97 are not a high priority to FCC.

My facts were correct - the "early 1990s" did not mean Fenruary 14, 1991.

Repost them all you want. Thay don't prove Roger was jamming. He never got any fines nor was his license suspended.

NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner.

Wrong, Toad, you play Culture Club and Wham and Milli Vanilli! To you that is classical music.

I want more (Nominations for Civility Awards)

More nominations, and a slight change. The awards suggested by Potter have been gender-balanced.

These are ALL nominations (no filtering has or will be done)
for the Civility Awards that I've received so far. There's still plenty of time to nominate others. Votes for write-ins
and "none of the above" will also be accepted. Nominations or votes that I can't find or are submitted after the first midnight GMT of 14 September cannot be accepted.

We're both wrong. Stewart also died in 1936. His death announcement was in the same April, 1936 issue of QST as Maxim's. K.B. Warner was never President of the ARRL. He was the Secretary. Maxim was succeeded by Eugene Woodruff W8CMP of State College, Pennsylvania.

He was quite well known in his day. He was certainly a shaper of policy.
From what I've read, he was known as a tyrant among the staff.

It doesn't seem to be a surprise to Len. He seems to think that there's a plot afoot, set in motion by the ARRL.

Len generally capitalizes "PROFESSIONAL". The term seems to have connotations of rank, status and privilege to him.

I'm sticking with the Rand Corporation. I think Len believes that there's a large, secret report being generated somewhere.

My mentor, A.G. Timberlake W8MN was one. Andy held the General and later the Advanced. He received the W8MN call by virtue of having gotten his first ticket in 1923.

I was able to obtain K8MN in a similar manner, though I didn't opt for a sequentially issued callsign. I requested a specific call. You were way ahead of me in obtaining the Extra ticket. I didn't get mine until 1977.

But often, after having read something, he'll lecture as if he is an expert in a field, even when he has no actual experience. Reading about rebuilding an automatic transmission is not the same as being able to rebuild the contraption.

That's where I was going with my earlier comments. Len will not accept being classified as a beginner in anything. He rants at length about radio amateurs having "rank, status and privilege", when "rank status and privilege" would seem to be very important to him.

That hasn't stopped him for lambasting you over your own homebuilt equipment.

Maybe Len feels that undertaking anything which doesn't result in profit for him, is simply beneath him.

I'd say so. Fortunately such circuits are mostly handled via landline and satellite these days. That makes outages more rare, but it doesn't rule them out. Equipment can and does fail and human error occurs.
All the "have to" talk in the world can't prevent that.

Len's suspicious of the League and suspicious of children. W8MN was 15 when he became a radio amateur. My late friend John Fox W4JBP was only 12 when he became a ham in 1912 (before Federal licenses were required).
I still have the REO spark coil he used in getting on the air.

I think they'll pry a microphone from Len's cold, dead fingers. Of

The ARRL's rules regarding candidacy for elected ARRL positions existed decades before Carl's run. The matter is moot since Carl's mouth would have precluded his being elected had he qualified for candidacy. The skeletons were pouring forth from the r.r.a.p. closet.

Wow, Goobers united!

I don't think Yaesu/Vertex Standard has a policy which precludes the hiring of those who worked at the League.

The League's policy doesn't preclude the candidacy of those who previously worked in professional communications or the manufacture and marketing of amateur radio equipment. They deal with those who work in such fields currently, at the time of the election.

K7BV never held an elected position at ARRL.

Sheesh!

Yes, the Conditional was a class of license. It conveyed the same privileges as the General Class ticket. One who held the Conditional was required to take the General Class exam before the FCC within a certain period of relocating to an area where he was within so many miles of an FCC testing point.

Oh, it doesn't likely equal the excitement of yours, UnWiseman. I'm not forced to live behind locked doors. I don't get visits from the police. I don't have any secret weekend missions which force my absence from the newsgroups. My life is pretty quiet.

> he lives in a > broken down farmhouse over a coal mine that can cave in at anytime,

Then you're mistaken. My home isn't broken down and it isn't over a coal mine at all. If the coal mine extends this direction, I stand to make a tidy profit in selling to the coal company. You should wish for a coal mine.

> he

I've had the opportunity to travel widely and to experience foreign cultures firsthand. I've done no building up of my accomplishments. They are what they are. Why don't you share some of your stellar accomplishments with us, Rog? Where have you traveled? For whom have you worked?

> He drives such a cheaply made Neon...

No, my Neon is just like the rest of them. This one is my third.

You aren't doing very well today. I don't have a combover at all. I have a full head of salt-and-pepper gray hair. You currently sport a pompadour, don't you?

Your powers of observation might be on the fritz. I've worn aviators for about fifteen years. Perhaps you had trouble seeing me through your thick glasses, Rog. After all, the only time we met, I sat right next to you. You aren't tall enough to see the top of my head.

You're describing halloween.

If you take Carls remarks in context, there are a lot of hams that would agree with him, and would welcome a scrapper in the white house, err volunteer office.

Sounds like the "original" dumbed down license if there ever was one.
Even the FCC didn't trust the system which granted conditional licenses.

The technician (with code) and the technician (without code) ran concurrently until the Plus was developed.

Two different licenses with the same name.

They weren't different flavors. They were different license classes with the same name.

Even when the FCC addresses amateur related issues, they do so poorly.

The fact is that there were two different technician licenses. You

If you reread Robesin's original posting, it implies that Robesin has been sodomized. And I thought he just had a bad experience during potty training. It must go much deeper than that, no pun intended .

Talk like that is never justified.

You know, although I really don't want to read such sickness any more than necessary, I read it again. It appears that Robesin is saying that his excrement is on "another man's genitals."

That just opens up a lot of questions...

Do you suppose that Robesin was sodomized?

You guessed it: Woger was sooooo drunk the first time he went to jail that he did what he thought the floor signs told him to do.

The rest of the story is too terrible to tell.

It is clear that it really bothers Len that some of us got our amateur licenses as "teeners", and rapidly progressed to the highest class of license.

Exactly. Being able to describe a bicycle doesn't mean someone can ride one.

I don't think so.

I think what bothered him was that Morse Code was not so easy for him to learn, and that he didn't see how he could make money with Morse Code skill. That made it a bad thing to Len.

So when you see those rants, remember that Len is really talking about himself.

To damage/destroy amateur radio. Remember that he has commented to FCC in great volume on a radio service in which he is completely uninvolved.

Ya broke da cipher!

Note that Len's real estate thing was an attempt to prevent others from doing what they wanted with their property.

Len should be working on improving his Morse Code skills.

This is where your analogy falls apart. CW is currently very useful to hams. It is in daily use. However, the arguments have already been presented and those with closed minds have rejected them.

That's a pretty pathetic troll on your part. Probably the most boring and unimaginative thing ever posted to Usenet.

To the Auk and AFA-B denizens: When someone is this boring should I play the killfile game and make him nym shift constantly? Or do we have some sort of award I can nominate him for. None of the awards I saw on the web page seemed to fit his boring childlike trolling of me.

The 30 Steps below will help all New Hams, it will also help you to find others just like yourself. These 30 steps should also be added to the present writtens.

Step One: Use as many "Q" signals as possible. Yes, I know they were invented solely for CW and are totally inappropriate for two meter FM, but they are fun and entertaining. They keep people guessing as to what you really meant. I.E. "I'm going to QSY to the phone." Can you really change frequencies to the phone? QSL used to mean, "I am acknowledging receipt", but now it appears to mean, "yes" or "OK". I guess I missed it when the ARRL changed the meaning. It is also best to use "OK" and "QSL" together. Redundancy is the better part of Lid-dom.

Step Two: Never laugh when you can say "HI HI". No one will ever know you aren't a long time CW rag-chewer if you don't tell them. They'll think you've been on since the days of Marconi.

Step Three: Utilize an alternative vocabulary. Use words like "destinated" and "negatory". It's OK to make up your own words here. I.E. "Yeah Tom, I "pheelbart zaphonix" occasionally myself."

Step Four: Always say "XX4XXX" (Insert your own call) "for I.D." As mentioned in Step One, anything that creates redundancy is always encouraged. That's why we have the Department of Redundancy Department. (Please note that you can follow your call with "for identification purposes" instead of "for I.D." While taking longer to say, it is worth more "LID points".

Step Five: The better the copy on two meter FM, the more you should use phonetics. Names should be especially used if they are short or common ones. I.E. "My name is Al... Alpha Lima" or "Jack.. Juliet Alpha Charlie Kilo." If at all possible use the less common HF phonetics "A4SM... America, Number Four, Sugar Mexico." And for maximum "LID points", make up unintelligible phonetics. "My name is Bob... Billibong Oregano Bumperpool."

Step Six: Always give the calls of yourself and everyone who is (or has been) in the group, whether they are still there or not. While this has been unnecessary for years, it is still a great memory test. You may also use "and the group" if you are an "old timer" or just have a bad memory. Extra points for saying everyone's call and then clearing in a silly way "K2PKK, Chow, Chow."

Step Seven: Whenever possible, use the wrong terminology. It keeps people guessing. Use "modulation" when you mean "deviation", and vice-versa.

Step Eight: If someone asks for a break, always finish your turn, taking as long as possible before turning it over. Whenever possible, pass it around a few times first. This will discourage the breaker, and if it is an emergency, encourage him to switch to another repeater and not bother you.

Step Nine: Always ask involved questions of the person who is trying to sign out. Never let him get by with just a "yes" or "no" answer. Make it a question that will take him a long time to answer.

Step Ten: The less you know on a subject, the more you should speculate about it in the roundtable. Also the amount of time you spend on the subject should be inversely proportionate to your knowledge of the subject even though you have no damn clue.

Step Eleven: Always make sure you try to communicate with only a handheld and a rubber duck antenna. Also, make sure you work through a repeater that you can hear very well, but it cannot hear you. This will put out a kind of "LID mating call": "Well, Joe, I can hear the repeater just fine here. I wonder why it can't hear me?" You will score maximum LID points if you are mobile, and with the radio lying in the passenger seat.

Step Twelve: If you hear two amateurs start a conversation, wait until they are twenty seconds into their contact, and then break in to make a call, or better yet to use the auto-patch. Make sure you keep the repeater tied up for at least three minutes. This way, once the two have re-established contact, they won't even remember what they were talking about.

Step Thirteen: You hear someone on the repeater giving directions to a visiting amateur. Even if the directions are good, make sure you break in with your own "alternate route but better way to get there" version. This is most effective with several other "would-be LIDs", each giving a different route. By the time the visiting amateur unscrambles all the street names whizzing by in his mind, he should have moved out of the range of the repeater. This keeps you from having to stick around to help the guy get back out of town, later.

Step Fourteen: If an annoying station is bothering you, make sure your other "LID" buddies have a "coded" frequency list. Even though "CODES" are strictly forbidden on Amateur Radio, it's really neat to practice "James Bond" tactics.

Step Fifteen: Always use the National Calling Frequency for general conversations. The more uninteresting, the longer you should use it. Extra points are awarded if you have recently move from an adjacent frequency for no reason. Make sure when DX is "rolling" in on 52.525 that you hang out there and talk to your friends five miles down the road about the good old CB days!

Step Sixteen: Make sure that if you have a personal problem with someone, you should voice your opinion in a public forum, especially a net. Make sure you give their name, call, and any other identifying remarks. For maximum points, make sure the person in question is not on the repeater, or not available.

Step Seventeen: Make sure you say the first few words of each transmission twice, especially if it is the same thing each time. Like "roger, roger" or "fine business, fine business". I cannot stress enough about encouraging redundancy.

Step Eighteen: If you hear a conversation on a local repeater, break in and ask how each station is receiving you. Of course they will only see the signal of the repeater you are using, but it's that magic moment when you can find a fellow "LID", and get the report. Extra points are awarded if you are using a base station, and the repeater is less than twenty-five air miles from you.

Step Nineteen: Use the repeater for an hour or two at a time, preventing others from using it. Better yet, do it on a daily basis. Your quest is to make people so sick of hearing your voice every time they turn on their radio, they'll move to another frequency. This way you'll lighten the load on the repeater, leaving even more time for you to talk on it.

Step Twenty: See just how much flutter you can generate by operating at handheld power levels too far away from the repeater. Engage people in conversations when you know they wont be able to copy half of what your saying. Even when they say your uncopyable, continue to string them along by making further transmissions. See just how frustrated you can make the other amateur before he finally signs off in disgust.

Step Twenty One: Use lots of radio jargon. After all, it makes you feel important using words ordinary people don't say. Who cares if it makes you sound like you just fell off Channel 19 on the citizen's Band? Use phrases such as "Roger on that", "10-4", "I'm on the side", "Your making the trip" and "Negatory on that".

Step Twenty Two: Use excessive microphone gain. See just how loud you can make your audio. Make sure the audio gain is so high that other amateurs can hear any bugs crawling on your floor. If mobile, make sure the wind noise is loud enough that others have to strain to pick your words out from all the racket.

Step Twenty Three: Start every transmission with the word "Roger" or "QSL". Sure, you don't need to acknowledge that you received the other transmission in full. After all, you would simply ask for a repeat if you missed something. But consider it your gift to the other amateur to give him solace every few seconds that his transmissions are being received.

Step Twenty Four: When looking for a contact on a repeater, always say your "listening" or "monitoring" multiple times. I've always found that at least a half dozen times or so is good. Repeating your multiple "listening" ID's every 10 to 15 seconds is even better. Those people who didn't want to talk to you will eventually call you, hoping you'll go away after you have finally made a contact.

Step Twenty Five: Always use a repeater, even if you can work the other station easily on simplex ... especially if you can make the contact on simplex. The coverage of the repeater you use should be inversely proportional to your distance from the other station.

Step Twenty Six: When on repeaters using courtesy tones, you should always say "over". Courtesy tones are designed to let everyone know when you have unkeyed but don't let that stop you. Say "over", "back to you" or "go ahead". It serves no useful purpose but don't worry, it's still fun!

Step Twenty Seven: Use the repeater's autopatch for frivolous routine calls... especially during morning or evening commute times. While pulling into the neighborhood, call home to let them know you'll be there in two minutes.... or, call your spouse to complain about the bad day you had at work. After all, the club has "measured rate" service on their phone line so they get charged for each autopatch call. Your endeavor is to make so many patches in a year that you cost the club at least $20 in phone bills. That way you'll feel you got your money's worth for your dues!

Step Twenty Eight: Never say "My name is ....." It makes you sound human. If at all possible, use one of the following phrases: a) "The personal here is ..." b) "The handle here is..."

Step Twenty Nine: Use "73" and "88" incorrectly. Both are already considered plural, but add a "s" to the end anyway. Say "73's" or "88's". Who cares if it means "best regards" and "love and kisses." Better yet, say "seventy thirds"! (By the way, seventy thirds equals about 23.3).

Step Thirty: If the repeater is off the air for service, complain about the fact that it was off the air as soon as it's turned back on. Act as though your entire day has been ruined because the repeater wasn't available when you wanted to use it. Even thought you have never paid a penny to help out with the upkeep of it.

Golden Killfile

Given to the most killfile-worthy net.kooks on Usenet. This award recognizes exceptional killfilable merit; if you are unworthy enough to be ignored by everyone on the face of the earth, you are eligible for this award.

That's a damn good impression of a Klansman - about the right level of Sorry, but your wrong, my analogy is just fine for this subject. CW to a ham, like carpentry to a mechanic, can be useful BUT is NOT NECESSARY for each to do what they want to do effectively and properly.

Don't be one of those closed minds.

Yes, a ham CAN use CW if he wants and more power to him/her to do so. A mechanic CAN learn to be a carpenter if he wants to and more power to him/her to do so. But carpentry will not make a mechanic a better mechanic, no more than CW will make a ham operator a better ham operator. More useful to themselves and others, but NOT better.

Just because carpentry COULD maybe be useful to a mechanic does not mean that he should be required to learn carpentry to be a mechanic. A mechanic can be a damn good mechanic without picking up a hammer and a ham can be a damn good ham without touching a key.

I said it before and I'll say it again. 70 years ago a good mechanic needed carpentry skills but no more. 70 years ago a good ham needed to know code but no more. A code test for todays prospective hams is like a carpentry test for todays prospective mechanics.

But if his decades-long interest in amateur radio was genuine, wouldn't it figure that Len would have continued in his efforts to master morse.
Wouldn't he have done it for the love of radio? Must everything be

But why? Is it only that Len was stymied in his efforts to master morse code? Could it be that he was thwarted in obtaining a promotion by

Shouldn't a PROFESSIONAL like Len be able to whip together something as care for equipement which appeared in QST or The Radio Amateur's

No, I said nothing about YOU having had contact with anything of mine.

Idiot.

Too bad you were too stupid to read what I wrote and understand it in the first place, but it's even worse that you've now tried to make something out of it that was never said and have made an even bigger fool out of yourself ever since.

You've STILL not gotten it right, fatboi.

It doesn't matter who the other man might have been, Morkie...The FACT is that you've now been ranting for three days and STILL haven't gotten a single thing right!

Idiot!

Sure it is...When it's true.

And Brain, you've not adequately explained your recent burst of your own USENET taunts and smears...Things you've said you don't do.

So...Why DO you do them?

Morkie does, however.

Nope.

That's now what was said, you idiot.

> the statement is lie I have no such knowledge nor do I disire it

You've admitted oral sexual contact with men after having had anal sex with them, Mork...Ergo you HAVE had YOUR excrement in YOUR mouth....Which is exactly what was said.

> what it prove is that Robeson will about the existance of homosxual

You need to complete your sentences, fatboi!

"...what it prove is that Robeson will about the....."

Idiot.

An you need to quit interspersing your fantasies with reality in the NG.

I said nothing in any post in months about "code testing". My last comments about Code testing were published in "CQ" magazine, not here.

There IS a high probability of your being right, Brian.

Slipping to "Lennie" as an attempt at a last dig is a highlighted error of this "Edison." :-)

Note also the FAILURE to document details. Robesin didn't state who I was allegedly impersonating...further reinforcing the "alternate personality" syndrome. All damning but nothing specific, typical Robesin posting.

>Did you catch his "conceed" posting to Mark?

Yes. Yuck. Robesin is going deeper, deeper into his abyss.

Quite true from thousands of posts in Google archives...one of which said "I can't control him" (or words to that effect). :-)

But that isn't the real point. Jimmy Miccolis MUST be the "guru" of ham radio lore. He ABHORS anyone correcting ANYTHING he says.
"Cross" him in any way and one has made an enemy for life. :-)
He comes across as the prototype "Mother Superior" complete with knuckle-spank ruler keeping everyone in (ARRL) line. Jimmy is a True Believer in the (virtual) Church of St. Hiram and one of the more literate of the Code Bigots. But, literacy does not excuse manufacturing typographical errors into vast reams of "civil discussion" which is really refined personal insults.

Davie Heil is another of the Code Bigots and is very busy being a "street fighter" type. More elan but always, always coming up with manufactured personal insults against non-code-test advocates. NOT doing as He says is "moral imperfection." Part of the problem Davie has is that he got topped years ago in his radio experience. He made much of his "foreign travels" and being DX, all courtesy of the US taxpayer, tried to make out like the Department of State had vast radio networks and tried to imply that he was doing James Bomb like activities in keeping tabs on commies in an adjacent African country to Guinea-Bisseau. I came along in here with some experience in Big Time 24/7 HF radio comms (also paid for by the US taxpayer) and Davie must have been quite put-out that ANOTHER, a NON-MORSE person, topped his State stations. [Horrors!] His implications were obvious, State was much more important than some old USN Chief's ship station (two of which were in the forum back then). Having a non-morse-loving person being involved with 40 HF transmitters and hundreds of thousands of TTY message relays per month was considered "not as good" as his State stations. :-) Heil is now on some weird Code Bigot trip trying to use non-love of morse code as some kind of "moral perversion" or that one MUST have an amateur license BEFORE getting a professional one in order to "show interest" in radio. :-)

The olde rrap Code Bigot troika leaves us with Stevie Robeson, aka "Robesin" aka any number of personalities. Stevie is just a frustrated person capable of a few things but has a mental woodie for RANK, TITLE, STATUS big enough to dock the USS Missouri in. He is a persistent BLUFFER, constantly alluding and implying things.

>> He also lacks ANY third-party reference to his War Hero >> claims and 18 years of his (supposed) life. <shrug>
>I think Frank was the third party and you know the results.

Yes, but in a round-about way. Frank showed HIS evidence of HIS USMC service but Robeson never did. Frank came up with common USMC terms, events, things familiar to other Marines (one of my old schoolmates was one and he put me through to some other Marines to verify that). Good enough proof for me, ex-Army and unfamiliar with intimate USMC life. Frank was honest. Stevie was devious and PERSONALLY INSULTING. Stevie's bluff was called and the insults were his only "reply." Sigh. He was just an IMPOSTER, a wanna-be who never was.

Katapult Kellie (#4) has given up on posting in here. Maybe he is a reasonable person who merely loves using morse but has an archtypical "Philly" attitude?

>> Ah, so! Well, it's part of the "morsemen can do NO wrong"

>We're in for the seventh wave of it.

Ah, "seven hostile waves"! :-)

That's the morbidly fascinating thing about the Code Bigots.
They take the code test issue so PERSONALLY. Something akin to incestuous love? The personal identification with morsemanship looks to be more zeal than the worst zealot.

Try to speak about the code test issue itself and ANY negative about it is taken as a "direct personal insult" to any Code Bigot! Amazing. Those Code Bigots come back with all sorts of personal insults from moral deficiencies to "laziness" to "instant gratification" and the very-telling "you in the younger generation are no damn good and we are 'superior to you!'" foul-mouthed emotionalism. Amazing. There seems to be no end in sight to their intense vindictiveness!

Technically, manual morse code mode is dead or dying in the radio world, all radio services. The efficacy of morse mode was never proven to match the Morse Myths claims. It is alive (and unwell) only in amateur radio, kept there in the USA by Code Zealots (ARRL core and other olde-tymers) who lobby for its continuation as a license test. Code testing is extremely emotional to the Code Zealots (most of which seem to be Code Bigots as well). They vent personal insults against all who even remotely go for elimination of the code test. They act as if it is the most important thing in life.

As I remarked, the vindictive zeal of these Code Bigots is morbidly fascinating. I would like to talk about the ISSUE of the code test but this arena is NOT the place. This forum has degraded to self-important insulters trying to outdo other self-important insulters with heaping gobs of plain filth in print.

I had just enough free time today to look over it. Yuck!

The "Al-Code-Ah" (Code Zealots) are always "right." Whatever they do is "perfect" and only "others" are in error. There is hardly any disagreement among themselves.

Robeson's problem is that he is too deep into bluffing his way through things. He isn't as much a zealot about code as he is FRUSTRATED, perhaps by his life existance. He gets highly emotional, angry at others disagreeing with him, far beyond reasonableness.

>That reminds me. There was a No-Coder named Val that talked up the >Code and they all loved him. He was the Darling of RRAP. I wonder if Val Germann his name? I remember that episode, Val saying all the "right" things to please the Code Zealots and Code Bigots.

The late W0EX was a Code Bigot and praised him to the skies...
while damning all the non-code-test advocates.

Deeper than that. "Droit de Signeur" seems to be closer, an intense for-royals-only identification and all plebians can go to hell.

True enough. Sigh. That "lip service" stuff is rampant in the Show Business part of L.A., even though much of the entertainment output is mediocre. I never could see that kind of ass-kissing and am glad to be associated with aerospace industry rather than show biz. Electrons, fields, and waves obey THEIR rules and don't give a damn about human emotions or ideals. More challenging...and rewarding.

Usenet is not equivalent to "the real world", except when posters out the personal contact info of other posters. Behaving as though usenet and "the real world" are the same fucking thing is a major net.k00ksign, much like standing on a street-corner and yelling about international conspiracies designed to rob oneself of one's career, house, and home for writing a book about international conspiracies, etc., is a "real world" k00ksign.

> You cross-post, hide behind remainers, and odd sounding nicks as if your

Why should I? Not that I'm in any way, shape, or form agreeing with or endorsing your characterisation of myself -- I've never used a remailer in my life, for one thing -- but x-poasting and wearing "odd nicks" are not major signs of immaturity. Responding to x-poasting, trolling, and flaming with outing of personal info, however, is immensely k00ky. You have major issues and at least a couple personality disorders, and need medication and all kinds of other therapy. Possibly institutionalisation, as well.

I don't think you fall under Formosa's Rule, however. You do know better, but you want to behave like a small child who hasn't gotten his own way, or has been taunted for acting up.

Accidents happen, true. They don't happen so often with experience, however, and Rhonda has that. At any rate, my point was that one needs to be able to trust one's fellow sky-divers completely, and Outer Filth cannot ever be trusted. Scum's like that.

You're a net.stalker, and an enabler of net.stalkers. Worse, you outed Rhonda to harass, intimidate, and terrorise her. The fact that you failed to accomplish your goal speaks well of her, but very ill of you.

Kadaitcha Man is a highly entertaining torll and a friend. You are a pale piece of pig's ear, as the Master of Sinanju would say (and really mean). Oh, look, more Outer Filth. You should join forces with them, and be a Quartet. Perhaps you could even add Woger Wiseman (or his frogger, who is Outer Filth in his own right) to join, and be a Quintet. The pedo's just your sort of company.

Tsk. M. Superior at it again. :-)

In 1951 I was graduating from Senior High School, coming up on Draft eligibility and the Korean War was going hot and heavy in northeast Asia. I went to work full-time as an illustrator to get enough money to attend a good art school.
A radio hobby was way low on my priority list then. [I would voluntarily enlist in the US Army in early 1952]

Where was Jimmy in 1951? Did he exist? No. 1951 is 55 years ago. Was Jimmy somehow "impressed" with the moral necessity to be an amateur morseman before conception?!? Probably so... morsemanship is in his jeans.

Jimmy thinks it HIGHLY IMPORTANT that all get amateur radio history (as told by the ARRL) CORRECT. Failure to do so, showing the slightest imperfection of factual detail (as lectured by Jimmy) is a moral and ethical felony punishable by ruler-spank and personal denigration. >:-(

Tsk. M. Superior is in her innuendo habit...

I explained that but you can't use my explanation and have to manufacture a NON-reason of your own.

In the early 1960s I did make an attempt to get my morse cognition skill up to 13 WPM, using mainly code tapes (magneitc). I'm not sure of the reason I had then, probably some pressure from co-workers who were into SSB voice; my lab boss at Ramo-Wooldridge was Ed Dodds, W6ERU, had a nice Collins setup in Woodland Hills, beam antenna, regular skeds with a friend in New Zealand. While CB (on 27 MHz) had been authorized in 1958, it had only spread so far in 1962 since the off-shore electronics industry hadn't yet begun to invade the market. My E.F. Johnson Viking Messenger had been removed from my 1953 Austin-Healey (an excellent ground plane with all-aluminum body) since my first wife coerced me into getting Detroit Iron.
Apartment dwelling was not good for CB then, nor for amateur radio. We went house-hunting.

No, Jimmy, that's YOUR ploy in here. :-)

No "grudge" for any amateur wanting to USE it. A view only against the alleged "necessity" to demonstrate morsemanship just to GET a license.

You've manufactured a "moral defect" which didn't exist.
You've conveniently OMITTED the fact that eleven years before then I began working Big Time HF radio comms where there was NO manual morse code used nor required. CB had already been authorized on HF five years before and required NO test whatsoever, certainly NOT morse code.
Seven years before that I'd been granted a First 'Phone commercial license, again not requiring any manual morse code demonstration yet I could (commercially) operate on HF using that. There arose what Cecil Moore would later term "return on investment" given the readily-observable CHANGE in communications already taking place in the late 1950s.

In using code tapes there was no "difficulty" in learning the tone patterns, only the TIME needed to get them down well enough. TIME is not an unlimited quantity and a LOT of things needed my time in my twenties. If I had to choose between a girlfriend (and later wife) and "morse code practice," those code tapes would be kicked to the gutter. If you think opposite, just shove a J-38 up yer bum and have an orgasm, morse style.

>Now you may wonder why, if Len could do 7 or 8 wpm at one point, he >didn't just get a Novice license, and improve his Morse Code skills by >operating, as most of us did.

I bought a house in 1963. Shortly thereafter my (then) wife was diagnosed with cancer. She died in 1964. I was then 31 and stuck with a bunch of bills that required a second job to break even. Night college classes had to be postponed for an indefinite period.
I kept the house.

With all that, you indefatiguable little character assassin,
you thought it was NECESSARY TO STUDY MORSE CODE?!?!?

If you really thought that, you have all the emotional sensitivity of a lump of wet clay...or an aberrant outlook that isn't in Psych 101 or 102 textbooks. Too twisted for my undergrad knowledge of psychology.

>The answer should be obvious: No way would Len allow himself to be >classified as a "Novice". That license did not carry the appropriate >title or status for him.

I'm not a "novice" in radio, Jimmy. Neither do I have any emotional need for Rank, Status, Title in a HOBBY activity. Since remodeling one unused bedroom into an office, I haven't even mounted the RCA "first-patent" plaque given to me by Chief Engineer Ray Aires nor the picture of me getting it with Jim Hall, KD6JG, my immediate manager at the time looking on. My wife is the same way (I do the bragging about her) and her 'sheepskins' (3) are in storage up north. All of my First 'Phone and GROL certificates and single college certificate are in the big safety deposit box down here; don't need them. I am secure in myself and what I can do.

Outside of the amateur radio pecking order, WHAT GOOD IS MORSEMANSHIP TODAY? It isn't used for regular comms by any other radio service. There isn't one single Public Safety radio service that uses manual morse code. There isn't even one surviving landline morse code telegraph circuit now. I've communicated by radio from land, from a cockpit (at the controls) in the air, from the sea (Ventura Harbor area), from a moving vehicle, from a stationary vehicle, while on march in the Army with a PRC-8 on my back. All during the last half century.
No "TITLES" necessary to do any of that or to do it well.

Riiiight, world's greates DXer, amateur radio is SOOOO much more advanced than every other radio. [barf, har har]

>So what? People have all kinds of skills, experience, etc. I'm sure IMPOSSIBLE in Jimmyworld. :-) [he will almost say that outright]

>and things where I have more experience/knowledge/skill than he.

Morsemanship, obviously. Something in great demand these days of the 1930s. Morse champions are to be rewarded with titles of nobility. Long live the morsemen. Huzzah.

On anything else, Jimmy hasn't made himself known. Such as what he does for a living (if a life of morsemanship is called living). Does Jimmy have a girlfriend? Boyfriend?
Any social life not requiring an antenna? Do we care?
[in general, no]

>Exactly. Amateur radio is "radio for its own sake".

Then why all the titles, rank, status, privilege, bandplans and attendant class distinction?

>In case you've forgotten, Len did some writing for the now-defunct >amateur radio magazine "ham radio". He got paid for those articles, of >course. None of his articles were actual projects, though.

That is a moral deficit? :-)

You are IN ERROR, Jimmy. Look up the one on using an HP-25 calculator to convert Noise Bridge readings. That was developed to aid some local friends on antenna measurements.
Look at the footnotes on that article and some of the examples. The whole "Digital Techniques" series was based on personal descriptions to others (some of which were amateurs)...the last one on a Phase-Frequency Detector was based on the prototyping I did, partly on an old Apple][, for an optical interferometer.

You conveniently forget the two-plus years I spent with Ham Radio magazine as an Associate Editor. Look on the mastheads for proof of that. Did that under Alf Wilson (W6NIF, took over after Jim Fisk suddenly died) and Rich Rosen (K1RR?). I opted out from HR from time pressure of self-employment...and learning that publisher Skip Tenney was going to sell HR to CQ.

>> ...and learning morse would apparently be "work" for Leonard.
>"hard work", actually. That's why he gave up on it.

No, DUMB work. Waste of my time. Why do I need morse?
Why does anyone need morsemanship? To keep the USA safe from terrorists? BWAAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!!!

>> It is always Big Time in the Len recounting.

It was NOT "Big Time?" What do you call 36 to 43 HF transmitters ON at any one time, power outputs of 1 KW to 40 KW, relaying 220 thousand message a month, the third largest station in ACAN-DCS? :-)

You need to see the following then:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/AlphabetSoup.pdf

I didn't make that one, just copied it. Circa 1962.
Produced by the Japan Signal Overseas Battalion, a merging of the old "71st" and "72nd" battalions.

>At least he has dropped the claim that HE worked 24/7.

I was on-call 24/7 with the scheduling times. NCOs got stuck with that. Longest I worked was 34 hours, one time.

Jimmy Noserve not know stuff like dat. He never be in military serving his country. Jimmy "serve country in different ways," the 'different' very, very undefined.

Tsk, from the 80s and later? :-)

Military has used all kinds of comms spectra/modes from 1980 onwards, mostly microwave...comm sats, troposcatter
(both microwave, work right through solar flares) and HF which is delayed only a few hours on CERTAIN HF routes.
HF radios with ALE (Automatic Link Establishment, not the drink).

>Looks like a deep seated insecurity on Len's part, though.

The only "deep seated insecurity" I have is the folding chairs on the patio. The webbing is damaged by 25-30 years of solar radiation. Seat oneself in them now and there is a great deal of "deep seated (to the floor) insecurity." :-)

Must decide whether to get webbed ones or solid plastic replacements. Still have the homebuilt swing sofa out there.

"Accusating?" :-)

I was not "accusating" the ARRL. I said their actions were "grandfatherly" to a pair of cute six-year-olds. I gave NO outright accusation if that's what your raging character assassination words tried to say. :-)

FCC amateur radio regulations are written such that ANY licensee, regardless of age, can operate (within bounds of their license class) at any time. Says NOTHING about "parental supervision" of six-year-olds or even nine-year-old Extras.

Correct, legal operation of radios requires MATURITY of RESPONSIBILITY. If you still think that 6 year olds and 9 year olds are MATURE, your head isn't on straight.

If nine-year-olds can become Extras, then what does that say about the MATURITY level of other Extras? :-)

Tsk, tsk, still bitching about a Comment I made to the FCC in January 1999? Seven years ago and you still can't let go of it? Not a good mental picture of you, Jimmy.

What has THAT manufactured dispute of yours to do with ANY radio?!?

Oh, you are homeless? (in Radnor, PA?)

Jimmy got no sense of LIVING on his own PROPERTY?

Jimmy and Davie only care about amateur morse code, ham radio, and growing antennas...

>> His life is otherwise empty, depsite the comfortable income, two Breathe deep with it on, Davie. Use your hands to tap out morse code if you get in trouble. :-)

>No, Ralph's requires that everything be Pretty Good. Including the >ketchup.

Ralphs, Vons, Albertsons chains all sell food made by professional food growers and producers. AMATEURS aren't wanted as growers/producers. Maybe at Tressieras or Food4Less, but we don't go there.

BTW, quit trying to glean info on where the Burbank HRO outlet is, it moved. You might tell Stevie the Imposter.
It isn't across the street from the Ralphs market where we shop for food.

>Nor I. Besides, it's just not going to happen.

The code test issue was never about me or "whether or not I get a license." That is in your weird, manufacture-the-worst-personal-assassination scenarios, Jimmy and Davie.

Long ago and several times since then I've said that my actions are for ending the US manual morse code test for an amateur radio license. There is NO "personal" motive in that...you are confusing PERSISTENCE with 'personal.'

You two need to take a look at what YOUR personal motives are in taking it so hard about those of us who seek removal of the code test. Several possibilities exist there:

1. Either of you (or both) are just Code Bigots, bigots always approving of actions of similar bigotry in others.

2. Either of you (or both) are control freaks determined to make all obey YOUR commands.

3. Neither of you, despite claims otherwise, understand that manual morse code is a dead or dying mode in ALL radio services; there is NO need to keep the manual morse test to provide a "pool" of trained morsemen for the national interest.

4. Either of you (or both) are scared that removal of the code test will end your bragging rights, of self-defined "importance" of rank-title-status-privilege based largely on morsemanship.

5. Either of you (or both) are elitist snobs who have the "deep insecurity" of NEEDING rank-status-title to make you appear "better" than others.

Either of you (or both) fit one of those 5 things above, possibly several of them. Irrelevant and a detail as to which but your actions DO show fitting at least one of them. Both of you have to understand that there are a great number of other citizens who also wish the code test removal. Both of you have to understand that such a position is NOT some idiotic moral imperfection but rather a reasonable opinion based on the advancement of technology of all radio by this first decade of the new millennium. Try to keep up. Unless it is too hard for you...

Any more than common sense and responsibility guide YOU, Lennie...?!?!

Here we have yet MORE evidence that Leonard H. Anderson is a pathological liar.

Lennie has REPEATEDLY stated that he NEVER addresses anyone with diminutives unless so addressed, yet in almost a decade of responses, James Miccolis has NEVER addressed Lennie as anything EXCEPT, "Len", or "Anderson".

Why does Lennie Anderson continue to act contrary to his own assertions to the contrary?

Kinda like the 1000's of posts we've had from Lennie H. berating anything / everything "Amateur"...

Pot/Kettle/Black.

Even MORE Pot/Kettle/Black.

What do you do before posting these, Lennie...?

Stare yourself down in the mirror for a few minutes?

Rest of Lennie's hypocritical review of Dave Heil snipped. Dave Heil's name and accomplishments in Amateur Radio have appeared in every English language ARS pulbication I am aware of, and at least one Japanese.

Lennie had some dubioulsy original theoretical peices in a long-since-defunct journal that has never since been footnoted in any other scientific or practical writings.

Snake-oil recipes, I believe.

Actually, here we have LENNIE'S own personna word-for-word.

Lennie reminds us all-too-often of his 1950's rank in the Army...His alleged title as an "engineer", and his "status" over All Things Radio as he is a "commercial" radio operator-vs-Amateur.

Lennie's the third biggest non-producer of anything worthy in Amateur (or any other form of) Radio, following closely behind
"Moonbounce Morgan" aka KB9RQZ and "Disc Jockey McDumb###", aka N9OGL.

Frankie's only honesty was admitting that he'd been court maritaled

Acutally, most of Frankie's rants were readilly put to bed...A LOT of them by a NAVY retiree, they were THAT transparent.

Only someone such as yourself drastically hoping to find fault with me would have believed any of Frankie's rhetoric.

Big SNIP of usual anti-Amateur Radio rhetoric...Heard here over

Why?

YOU didn't mention it...Why should he have?

That period of time ALOS falls into YOUR "I had an on-going interest" rants. Pointing out that there was the creation of a class of license that would even allow a non-hacker such as yourself to get a license for access to 97%+ of all Amateur priviledges in that interim only serves to show that despite getting EASIER to get on the air, you STILL can't manage to get past the basics....

Yet they still REQUIRE it sixteen years later, despite having had thier hands un-tied almost three years ago.

Obvioulsy it IS still an issue, even to them!

So Jim Miccolis is a "bigot" and a "zealot" for his beliefs, yet
YOU are an "advocate"...?!?!

Nice spin-doctoring, Herr Goebbels.

with respect.

Pretty much leaves all of your "I'M A PRO-CODE-TEST-BIGOT VICTIM" rants in the trash, Lennie.

Uh huh.

Still lot's of people managed to pass the Novice tests then.

Even more managed to pass the Exams for the other classes.

You were not one of them.

Hmmmmmmmmm......

In 1972 I was a Sophomore in High School, working two part time jobs (without the benefit of yet having a driver's license), hitch-hiked out to the airport to start my flying lessons, and was active in the Civil Air Patrol Cadet program.

Oh yeah...I also got my Novice license, WN8OAH, in the middle of all of that.

I would voluntarrily enlist in the US Marine Corps in 1974.

Here's Lennie taling sexual innuendo lessons from Morkie.

So far, we've not been treated to anything of a "historical" nature by Jim Miccolis that WASN'T true.

So it seems the "moral and ethical felonies" alluded to by Lennie were Lennie's.

I doubt Jim's "error's" need any more room than the tip of one,
maybe two fingers.

However considering the number of times YOUR hide has been left exposed in this forum, I'd say it's a pretty good thing that YOU have the "vast expanses" to archive upon, Lennie....

QUOTE FROM QRZ, DATED 05 SEPTEMBER 2006

Names and Places Search
This form can be used to search for names, cities and towns, states and Zip Codes. The format is free form meaning you can input whatever you like into the box. Note: callsigns are excluded from the search.
Enter name or keyword(s) to search

Use Simple Search Other Options...

To search for the name or address of a club or person, enter the first and/or the last names (in any order), or a part of the address (like number and street) and/or the Zip Code. Go get Similar Zip codes, use the star () such as '85' which returns mostly Arizona zip codes. Commas and other punctuation are ignored. Both upper and lower case letters are treated the same.

Note: This search may take from 10 to 90 seconds to complete depending on the current server load and the complexity of the query.

Who's "Robesin"...?!?!

As for the comments you quoted, they were mine, yet nothing
"implies" anything that I have been sodomized, voluntarilly or otherwise.

Bad, BAD English comprehension, Brain.

Are we to assume that YOU are "implying" that your English skills rival Morkie's?

Seems so!

Uhhhhhhh...That would be a repressed memory on your part, Brain.

Acutally, I have to wonder what goes through the mind of BPB when he, on the one hand, decires others for such exprfessions, yet perpetuates them himself.

No doubt that the Feeble Fiver TRULY "enjoy each other's

What good will it do to deliver an NAL to Toiddie?

He's still having a hard time with "phase distortion." He'll be

I never suggested that you have engaged in ANY kind of "sexaul" act with me, Morkie.

I DID claim that I conceed that YOU KNOW WHAT IT'S LIKE to ahve
one, though, and that I WILL NEVER have that experience.

Please try to get it right.

YOU have re-cited the same comments over and over, so perhaps ONCE you'll get it right.

Right there.

I never "conceeded" that YOU could lick anything of MINE, Morkie...

YOU made THAT suggestion to haev intimate contact with me, Morkie.

I explained the consequences of your proposed actions.

TRY to get it RIGHT this time.

Your cowardly froup-snecking hace been thwarted again. Your posts definitely belong in the groups where you are best-known (and a bunch of others where you'll certainly _become_ known), so they can all see the coward that you are.

You only dream that you have concluded something, K00k. Instead, it's merely just begun to get interesting to non-techies. You have no idea how much you fucked yourself, Dustbin, but you're going to find out. After a few years of having your name blasted all over usenet (and eventually the internet) as Someone Never To Be Trusted, you may find yourself getting a bit lonely. The situation will not be rectifiable except with those who have no net.connection or net.awareness.

Yeah, that's a real nice sense of proportion you got there. "Trolling = child molestation". Somehow, I think not.

Y'know, repeatedly misspelling a word when you can see the proper spelling right there is a bit of a k00ksign in itself, and rather telling about your claim not to be a "sociopath". After all, no one called you a socialpath.

Oh, look, a Dustbin quote.

"Incentive licensing" went into effect in the late 1960s. There were six classes of license prior to "incentive licensing".

That wasn't the time period under discussion. Incentive licensing was in effect then.

The incentive licening changes of 1967 to 1969 did not create any new license classes.

You don't know, do you, Len? Or maybe you do know, but don't want to admit it, because doing so would show the errors in your anti-ARRL rants.

> voluntarily enlist in the US Army in early 1952]

Bully for you, Len. What does that have to do with your mistakes and ignorance?

By the time I was graduating from high school, I'd already had an Amateur Extra class license for two years and had been a licensed radio amateur for almost five years. Then I went to EE school. Graduated in four years, having worked all the way through those years.

The war in those days was in Southeast Asia. Some people my age went, others did not.

But it's not really about me, Len. Whether I was around in 1951 or not has no effect on the non-ARRL groups that influenced FCC back then.

The fact is that you simply don't know much about amateur radio history, and what you do know is full of errors and bias.

> Where was Jimmy in 1951? Did he exist? No.

So what? Can a person only talk about things that happened during their lifetime? You rant on and on about what Maxim and ARRL did, years before you existed.

The difference is that you repeatedly get the facts wrong.

Len, you should work on improving your Morse Code skills.

That's because of your behavior, Len.

I have had many civilized, respectful, well-behaved code-test discussions here with Phil Kane, K2ASP and Bill Sohl, K2UNK. The latter is a director of No-Code International, and is one of the staunchest no-code-test advocates around. Yet he makes his points without the name-calling and personal insults that are your stock-in-trade whenever someone disagrees with you. Same for K2ASP.

Both of them have disappeared from rrap. I stop back once in a while to see if things have changed. They haven't. I post a few license numbers here, and you're off on a tear with insults and general adherence to your profile. Pitiful, really.

It's easy to tell when you start losing an argument - that's when you start with the nicknames and personal insults.

I'll echo Sharon on this. He seems rather boring, but not especially ko0ky. Simple antagonism, flaming or arguing isn't enough to merit attention for the sake of awards. Shoot, even Bartlo would fade away if not for his ko0ky obsession with his PSet Litses.

As a piece of advice, a ko0k's ko0kiness should only be evoked, not created or simulated. Have you ever heard of the Formosa Rule?
(Not that Slow Code seems to be a candidate for the Formosa, as yet.)

Funny how Morkie can claim that his alleged dyslexia keeps him from passing the General, yet he claims he successfully completed not one, but three college degrees.

If there was ever greater evidence of what a liar Mork Moron, is, that's got to be in the top three.

Say what?

The truth...?!?!?

OF course! There's nothing "sick" about pointing out your lying,
Morkie.

> You are the one making the perverted posts, #####. You are too #####ing > stupid to learn Morse Code.

He's not too stupid...He's too lazy.

I ahve no doubt that he has indeed had some learning disabilities...But rather than encourage him to work around them, mumsie and popsie just gave him everything.

Now he's so used to getting what he want's for nothing, he thinks that's the way it's supposed to be.

No doubt he's found that out late in life, and probably why he's been investigated in two states for abusing his dilapidated father.
Mumsie is probably still on the ranch in Nevada catering to the "spank me mommy" crowd. Everyone has their fetish...

No...it would be a lie to day I've claimed that you're having sex with me.

It WOULD be fair to say that I have conceeded that you have had experiences that I never will have...Tasting my excrement on another man's genitals is one of them.

A favorite investigative tool used by the FCC involves getting hard copy admissions of rule violations from abusers prior to taking any formal action. It looks as though Todd may have been taken in by a sympathetic sounding poster on his blog who is going by the nick of "kirkw5."

It wouldn't surprise me at all if kirkw5 turns out to be conducting a preliminary investigation for the FCC or the DoJ. It's a lot less expensive than sending someone into the field.

A word of advice, Todd: If you're arrested, don't misinterpret the yellow floor signs in the jail which say "piso mojado." Woger did that when he went to the slammer, and the rest is ugly history.

that is the simplest and most logical inference it is is not the only answer He could have been refered to the proccess of just him defeacting on another man a kinky act (not my kink but I try not to be too judgemental of such things) in any event Robeson statesdescribes a Sex act involving himself and 2 Men one of them he claims is ME

Oh, but it isn't offtopic, dustfart. You see, people need to know about your dishonest, double-crossing perfidy and your insane "Rhonda is going to troll me so I'll play it that way" madness.

You mean respect a newsgroup as in "I could easily turn alt.usenet.kooks into a cesspool of encoded posts. Bringing the noise ratio up so high as to make the group worthless"? Hmmm? BWAHAHAHHAAHHA! You utter fuckwit.

canyou get it through your head I have xero interest in Morse Code

if you could give me the abilty to read it I would not use it since I am not interested in what it offers

I have psent a good part of youth on the mode and I will waste no more time on it

I don't feel that Ham is CW, the FCC and the ARRL agree it isn't for the type of contacts I could make with CW I can make much the same contact using JT 65 modes which I have made afew moon bounce contacts and in creasing number of terreail contact using MS based proagation and all without having to listen to static. If I listen to static I want to hear a person not a machine be it computer or code key

I will can and will listen for the off chance of hearing either SOS or OSO if I hear either I boot up my CW reading program and try to help out if it apreas I can read the signal and no one is responding. a very unlikely event I suspect.

aside from that nothing could get to to use that mode. ona personal level I DO despise it and hope to hear its demise (by the volontary disuse of the ARS the last bastition of CW use) I may not live that long, but I have hopes

BTW calling some one lazy is just not a good way to get to them to do something you want them to to do

Mark has issues and he spams this and other newsgroups, but I don't believe that he is a registered child molester. That'd be very easy for you to prove--but you haven't done so and won't do so because you cannot.

You have an obsession with adult/child sex, homosexual acts, animal sex which includes the spouses, children and parents of others. Where did that come from, Roger? Were you abused as a child? Did you find out something about your birth parents?

You need some psychiatric help. You aren't sane.

Incentive licensing was implemented in two stages, the first in November 1968 and the second in November 1969. I was one of those who was perfectly content with a General Class license until the implementation of Incentive Licensing. I drove to Dallas and passed the Advanced in 1970. It wasn't until 1977 that I was moved to try for the Extra.

You used too much Conditioner when you had your hair permed.
Tell the hairstylist that affects your ego too strongly.

So, the privileges of the Conditional Class was somehow "different" because the FCC made allowances for those who had long distances to travel to their Field Offices? Point those out in detail, why don't you? Or do you want to go into YET ANOTHER semantics battle in order to prove your "rightness?" [I opt you go for the latter]

Tsk, tsk, tsk...show what I originally wrote for a time period that started all this semantics battling of yours.
NOW you claim YOUR stated time period is the ONLY one under discussion?

Of course it is YOUR time period. You are Time Lord and Dr. Who all together in the 1930s when Kode was King. :-)

"Licening?" I liked your original typo better. :-)

So, what are you setting up for another semantics battle with that two-year period, Jimmy? Or are the rules of "time period under discussion" now limited to those two years you've stated? Keep us informed.

The League is your shepherd, you shall not want... :-)

Mother, kindly remember that ARRL membership has never been more than a quarter of all licensed US amateur radio licensees. It is a MINORITY "representative" organization.
The ARRL "leadership" is highly biased towards morsemanship and never fails to promote that. You abhor such statements because you are a staunch Believer, perhaps supplicant at the Church of St. Hiram. Poor baby.

Failure to "Believe" in the ARRL is an "error?" Okay, then THREE-QUARTERS of US amateur radio licensees are "in error."
Go point out their "error" to them, why don't you?

So, how did you "serve in other ways?"

Tsk, tsk, didn't you READ in your military expertise books that only one out of seven in the military were ever directly involved in battle? That little factoid has been common knowledge in the military from WW2 to the present day. Your precious body stood a good chance of being one of those NOT in battle or being harmed.

Tsk, you seem to be working very hard to showcase yourself.

That much is true. If you didn't exist then, you could not do much of anything... :-)

Sigh, you REALLY need to work on your PEOPLE SKILLS, Jimmy.

I have to admit that I haven't committed the ARRL's version of US amateur radio history to heart or memory.
I've only been working IN radio-electronics since 1953 and no doubt have "missed" the glory of pioneering radio done by radio amateurs since then. <yawn> Since you consider amateurs to be oh, so much BETTER than us pros, you will naturally go berserk whenever the League is faulted or I fail to glorify the glory and majesty of morse code. Of course, the ENTIRE radio world outside of ham radio is "full of errors and bias" because they've GIVEN UP on using morse code for communications. Looks like you have a BIG job ahead to "correct their errors!"

Clever biasing technique you have, Jimmy, that of taking sentences out of context and then manufacturing a "dispute" or whatever as YOU choose. :-)

Doesn't seem to bother you, Jimmy, although you DO concentrate overmuch on times BEFORE you existed.
You are able to make virtual Mount Everests from little ant hills about "historical facts" which, for amateur radio, are limited to the ARRL's biasing about itself.
Minutae. Things made much of in order to divert a thread subject.

>You rant on and on about what Maxim and ARRL did, years

Not really. :-) When I was born Hiram Percy was still quite alive, Kode was King in US amateur radio, and the ARRL had managed to reach the top of the ham club food chain. :-)

Not much has changed in ham radio since. You still revere Maxim, think Kode is King, and get totally pissed whenever anyone says the least little negative about the League. :-)

>The difference is that you repeatedly get the facts wrong.

Tsk. Why do you bother replying to me at all? :-)

Jimmy, you need to work on your PEOPLE SKILLS.

Cut the crap, Jimmy. Quit trying to present yourself as the oh-so-very-SUPERIOR "Mr. Perfect." You are NOT perfect nor an "example of good comportment." You come across as both superior and arrogant...plus the total inflexibility of considering other folks' opinions and viewpoints.

This is NOT a thread to discuss OLD HISTORY of US amateur radio as spoon-fed you by the ARRL. The ARRL is NOT a group of "perfect" leaders with "perfect" comportment, either.

Jimmy, if you can't stand newsgroup heat, get OUT. It obviously upsets you to be challenged or not recognized as a "newsgroup leader."

>Both of them have disappeared from rrap.

ERROR! Bill and Phil are still in Google archives. Anyone

Poor baby. More evidence of how you can't stand the heat of newsgroup behavior. You crib someone else's stats without giving them credit, then repeat boilerplate paragraphs that are seven yours old, implying that those are "yours" and you get all upset about being called on that? ANYONE can find statistics on the number of licensees and classes and the growth/loss figures. See QRZ and Hamdata for two readily-accessible sources.

Tsk, you have serious problems with PAST disagreements.
Back at the last restructuring you tried to play with percentages to somehow "prove" that the Technician class belongs in the code-tested group because code zealot Speroni lumped them together in HIS biased-for-code website. That's all in the Google Archives but one has to go back a few years to see it. A transparent attempt Jimmy and several called you out on it. That's also in archives.

>It's easy to tell when you start losing an argument - that's when you

Being against morse code testing IS a "personal insult" to any Code Zealot. TS for them. :-)

Tsk, more evidence of the self-described "superiority" of the Code Zealots. THEY can do NO wrong...such as Robeson, Heil, "Slow-Blow Code" and others, all having maximum-rate code-tested licenses (unknown about Blow Code who won't state his/her callsign). Not to mention the anony-mousies such as "Thomas Edison" or "Not Cocksucker Lloyd," etc.

You concentrate on ONE or TWO posters at a time, Jimmy, always denigrating and claiming "error" on the part of no-code-test advocates. You are obviously subjective as hell while claiming "objectivity." Total PR bullshit, Jimmy.

It hasn't been an alleged necessity, Len. The necessity to pass a morse exam in order to obtain a license was a reality.

Your tale was interesting in the first few tellings. The hole in your story is that it was a military station and not an amateur radio station. Your military experience had nothing whatever to do with amateur radio.

> CB
> had already been authorized on HF five years before and

Then again, CB radio isn't amateur radio and it was never intended to be such. The Citizens Band precluded user modification to the FCC type-accepted equipment, mandated no more than five watts output and restricted antenna height. There were prohibitions on working DX.

There were limits on how long one could transmit in a given time period.
Operation was limited to spot channels.

Imagine that! A radiotelephone license didn't require morse! That wasn't amateur radio.

I feel your pain, Len. I learned morse in the Cub Scouts over the course of several weekly meetings. When I studied for my Novice exam, it took all of two weeks of spare time brushup to bring my code speed to 5 wpm. Still, I managed to squeeze the time in between my school activities, homework, sports, learning to play the guitar, television and church.

How did Jim assassinate your character, Len? You've had many years since those days in which to obtain an amateur radio license. You've been wasting your time posting here for better than a decade. You don't have to work. You don't have house payments. You've wasted ten years or better.

You're certainly not novice or neophyte in amateur radio. You have yet to reach that plateau, Lennie.

But those things seem very important to you in a PROFESSIONAL capacity. Have you stayed away from social clubs and lodges too, Len? Those things are filled with rank, status and privilege. Most hobbies have some sort of pecking order associated with them. Guys are beginners, competent participants or experts in the field. The only way you can avoid those labels is to be a loner. That's pretty hard to do in amateur radio.

Does that address your previous PROFESSIONAL status? It has nothing to do with amateur radio, yet you found the need to tell us about it.

But you felt the need to comment on those non-amateur radio related things. If you really felt secure in yourself and what you can do, why did you feel compelled to comment on them?

None of those things is related to amateur radio, yet you felt the need to tell us about them. Do they simply relate to your perceptions of your own rank, status or privilege?

I've never laid claim to any such title. Amateur radio operation is different from other radio services. You've unwittingly showed us a number of examples above. It isn't primarily a point-to-point service.
It uses a variety of modes. It isn't primarily channelized. It isn't a commercial or military service. It covers wide portions of the spectrum. My claim that those who are proficient in the use of morse, when it comes to amateur radio operation, is an absolute fact.

How do any of those change one's love of radio as radio? Do you think that all bandplans have to do with titles, rank, status or privilege?
You don't really need to worry about it. You don't hold an amateur radio license of any class. You have no status, rank or privilege in amateur radio.

Len Anderson: Self declared several decade interest in amateur radio.
He has never attempted to pass an amateur radio exam. It has been more than a decade since he began posting to r.r.a.p. He still has no amateur radio license. Talk about wasting your time!

"We're number three! We're number three!"

Yet you've continued to denigrate the experience of others in "Big Time" HF communications. Some have done as much for longer than you, Leonard. Some have actually operated such "Big Time" gear--keyed the transmitters, changed frequencies, selected from a whole field full of monster antennas. Your tale goes back over half a century and it isn't amateur radio.

That's quite different from your earlier claim. I've run the CQ Worldwide DX SSB Contest for as long as 45 of 48 hours. My friend OH2MM has often worked the entire 48 hours during the CW weekend. Of course we're getting older and no longer have the stamina to do so. My last such effort was when I was 42. Ville continued to do so into his 50's. Last year I managed only a feeble 38 hours. I've never worked 24/7 and neither has anyone else in the history of time. It is a physical impossibility.

The point in time is irrelevant. A major solar flare is a major solar flare. If you're running an HF circuit, you're often out of luck until its effects pass.

> Military has used all kinds of comms spectra/modes from > 1980 onwards, mostly microwave...comm sats, troposcatter

We were discussing HF, Leonard, though even sats may be disrupted. A transatlantic microwave link is a creature I'm not familiar with.

> and HF

But the circuit HAS TO WORK according to you. If it is out for a few hours, it isn't working. I've personally observed the West African Echo, severe night time multipath distortion preventing baudot circuits from working for as long as twelve hours, regardless of chose frequency. The circuit HAD TO WORK, but it didn't. If our equipment had worked as low as 2 MHz, it might have.

I care about much, much more, Lennie. It isn't really material I care to discuss in an amateur radio forum--or with you.

I'm sure someone with no life will make a note of it. Maybe Wiseman!

He can add it to that list of information containing the information on

Well, Lennie, it has to have something to do with you personally. As you demonstrated when talking about other areas of your life, you don't do things unless there is something in it for you.

There were actually three stages, Dave, but only the last two are usually remembered.

The first stage happened in mid-1967. That was when the Novice license term was doubled to two years, and the Advanced license was reopened to new issues. The existing written test for Extra was split into two elements, with one for Advanced and the other for Extra.

I was one of the first two-year Novices, license dated October 12, 1967.

I was lucky enough to be just a subway ride from the Philly FCC office, with a bit of walking to and from the Market Frankford line (now known as SEPTA's Blue Line, it is partly elevated, partly underground, and partly at grade level, yet is usually called "The El").

I figured the FCC wouldn't be making the tests easier in the future, so I upgraded as soon as possible.

Six license classes before and six license classes after, until the Conditional was eliminated in the mid-1970s.

Yup.

I also worked part time, was active in some extracurricular school activities, and built much of my amateur radio station from recycled parts taken from TVs, BC radios and WW2 surplus. Swords into plowshares, doncha know.

And maintained a high enough academic average to be admitted to every college/university I applied to. My accomplishments as a radio amateur figured into my being accepted to EE school.

When you have to spend time building a skill, you spend more time learning other related things as well. Hams that haven't had to study to pass a 13 wpm CW exam, probably don't know the written portion of the exam as will as hams that did. If I hadn't had to pass 20 wpm for my Extra, I would have taken the exam a lot sooner, but as I had to build my CW abilities, I also spend more time learning the theory too. It made me a better ham.

You people don't want knowledgable hams anymore. CB'ers dont have to learn CW, are they better?

It's only implication in this context is your idiotic misinterpretation of simple English, Morkie.
